GUAM NAVAL BASE REJECTED IN HOUSE BY 205-168 VOTE

Democrats Split on Plan as Charges of Bowing to Japan, 'Provocative Act' Create Tempest.

NIPPON FORTIFIES ISLES, BODY TOLD

Rest of Bill, Authorizing $48,800,000 Defense Projects, Passes by 368 to 4.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—After a tempestuous three-day debate, the house rejected today, 205 to 168, an administration plan to thrust the nation's line of naval air bases 5,000 miles into the Pacific by improving the island of Guam.

A $5,000,000 authorization for construction on the island was slashed from a naval bill after legislators had voiced repeated warnings that the project would be an act so provocative to Japan that war might follow. The Democratic majority in the chamber split on the issue. Sixty-four Democrats joined 138 Republicans, two Progressives and one Farmer-Laborite against the air base. Voting in favor of it were 152 Democrats, 15 Republicans and one American Labor party man.

Representative Sutherland, Democrat, New Jersey, who offered the amendment to eliminate the project, said that he could see no worth in extending a line of defense so far into the Pacific.

"What do you suppose we would think if Great Britain undertook to fortify Bermuda today?" he asked. "Would we consider it an overt act, a hostile act?"

To spend $5,000,000 on such a project "in troubled Asiatic waters," he added, could be construed

Bette Davis and Spencer Tracy Win Film Awards for Best Performances

'Jezebel' and 'Boys Town' Characters Basis of Academy Honors.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 23.—Bette Davis and Spencer Tracy tonight were declared winners of the annual awards of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences for the best performances during the past year of a film actress and actor.

Miss Davis' award was on the basis of her performance in "Jezebel" and Tracy's for his work in "Boys Town."

"You Can't Take It With You," produced by Columbia Studios, was given the award for the most outstanding film of the year.

It was the third time a Frank Capra-directed picture took the academy award. The Italian-born director won previously with "It Happened One Night" and "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town."

It was the second time Tracy had been honored, a role in "Captains Courageous" having previously won him the honor.

It was the second time Miss Davis had won the award. In 1935, she won the honor for her work in "Dangerous."

Tracy defeated in the final vote Charles Boyer (Algiers), James Cagney (Angels With Dirty Faces), Robert Donat (The Citadel), and Leslie Howard (Pygmalion). "Boys Town," in which Tracy essayed the role of Father Flannagan, famed Boys Town, Neb., founder, was produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Walter Brennan won the award for the best supporting actor for his role in "Kentucky," while Fay Bainter was credited with the best work as a supporting actress for her part in "Jezebel."

Other "bests" included: Direction—Frank Capra for "You Can't Take It With You." Original Story—Dore Scharf and Eleanor Griffin for "Boys Town."

Screen Play and Dialogue—George Bernard Shaw, "Pygmalion." Adaptation of Screen Play—W. P. Lipscomb, Cecil Lewis and Ian Dalrymple, "Pygmalion."

DOUGLAS CITIZENS URGE ANNEXATION TO FULTON COUNTY

Representative Fowler Ready to Introduce Legislation If Voters Take Definite Steps.

FINANCES, SCHOOLS NOT IN GOOD SHAPE

Fulton Officials Reported Secretly Opposed to Adding Western County

A proposal to annex Douglas county to Fulton county is being heatedly agitated in Douglasville and county areas, Alpha Fowler, Douglas representative, asserted yesterday.

Though no definite step toward this end has been taken, with the exception of meetings to discuss the possibility, Fowler said he would willingly introduce and sponsor whatever legislation would be necessary to give the residents of his county the right to vote on annexation if it is desired.

Opinion on the procedure to be followed in such annexations is divided, some lawyers holding that an election only in the county wishing to annex to another is necessary, while others assert that to make sure of the constitutionality of the move, elections should be held in both counties. A two-thirds favorable vote would be needed.

Schools in Bad Shape.

In either case, passage of enabling laws providing for the elections and calling upon the ordinaries to set the dates and make arrangements, is required, it was said.

Douglas county has been hit heavily by the homestead and personally exemption laws and its schools have been on the verge of closing, having shut their doors to students in the recent financial crisis brought on by the failure of the state to provide funds.

Fowler reported that many prominent citizens met recently in Douglasville to consult on the advisability of attempting to annex the county to Fulton, and he stated that the majority was favorable to the proposal.

They felt, it was said, that Fulton being one of the wealthiest counties in the state, annexation would aid in solving the financial dilemma of Douglas.

40-Mill Tax Rate.

The tax rate over the county is approximately 40 mills and higher in certain school districts, it was said.

Fulton's rate, not yet set for the

LAWMAKERS FEAR U. S. WOULD HALT HIGHWAY MONIES

Harris Pushes Fight for 20 Per Cent Slash in Appropriations, Warns Sales Tax Is Alternative

SEEKS TO PROTECT SCHOOLS, PENSIONS

'Teeth' for Tax Laws To Assist Collections Asked in House Measure.

The house of representatives yesterday refused to divert Highway Department funds to balance the state budget without additional taxation.

H. B. Edwards, representative from Lowndes, proposed to slash allocated highway funds by 20 per cent—in line with other reductions in appropriations being voted by the house—but members declined to change the present 97 per cent allocation, fearing that to do so would jeopardize federal highway aid money under the Hayden-Cartwright act.

Speaker Roy V. Harris refused to go along with Edwards in attempting this reduction, and Representative Paul S. Etheridge, of Fulton, announced the attorney general had told him diversion would endanger the millions Georgia gets from the federal government for roads.

World Balance Budget.

However, Harris did point out that this 20 per cent diversion would balance the budget if adopted. Representative James V. Carmichael proposed to leave the highway funds as at present, which the house did. It could, of course, make a change later if desired.

Meantime, administration uncertainty over success of sales tax legislation appeared in the general assembly when Speaker Harris, urging 20 per cent reduction in all appropriations, demanded of the house:

"What's the use of appropriating the money if we are not going to pay the bill?"

Taking the floor to push a 20 per cent reduction in the Department of Agriculture funds, Harris asserted:

"If I knew the legislature would vote for a sales tax, I wouldn't be trying to get these 20 per cent cuts."

The speaker on several occasions has advocated whacking both allocated and appropriated funds in the $94,905,356 biennial money measure now before the house, sitting as a committee of the whole.

MORGENTHAU ACTS TO HELP BUSINESS

Calls for Congress Study on Tax Structure to Find Any 'Deterrent.'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(P)—Declaring that the Roosevelt administration wants businessmen to "make money," Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau called today for a re-examination of tax laws to see if there are any "deterrents" to business.

By stating at a press conference that the business world need fear no new tax burdens, Morgenthau reaffirmed a similar promise given recently by President Roosevelt.

The secretary's remarks were apparently an effort to encourage the economic upturn which most government economists predict will be resumed in April.

He said flatly that he had under consideration no new tax legislation, except re-enactment of expiring excise levies, and expected none except possibly a measure to raise about $200,000,000 for farm benefits such as President Roosevelt asked congress for, and failed to get, last year.

In view of the efforts of Morgenthau and other officials to conciliate business, the capital was looking forward with much interest to a major speech to be made by Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins tomorrow night. Hopkins will speak from Des Moines, Iowa, over the radio at 9:30 p. m. Atlanta time, and it is widely believed he will outline his program for government-business co-operation.

Meanwhile Speaker Bankhead stressed at a press conference today that President Roosevelt had made known "rather definitely" that he did not intend to propose any new legislation this session, other than issues which already are before congress.

While these developments bearing on business were taking place, government economists were analyzing the economic situation and declaring that business was "pausing for breath" following the upturn that lasted from last summer to Christmas.

Since Christmas, the volume of production and trade has shown little change, and the burning question here is when a new upturn can be expected.

Economists employed by the federal government mostly say it will take place in April, largely because of the impact of federal spending, particularly for PWA projects which will get under full blast in the spring, and because of the apparent demand for new homes. Possible utility and rail-

U. S. Must 'Manage' Way Out Of Recession, Says Rukeyser

Noted Economist Tells Georgia Editors Ceiling Should Be Put on Spending; More Money Asked for Herty Foundation.

By HERMAN HANCOCK, Staff Correspondent.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 23.—America must "manage" its way out of the recession by balancing its economy as a prelude to balancing the national budget, Merryly Stanley Rukeyser, nationally known writer on economics, told Georgia editors today as they called on the Georgia legislature to make new contributions to the Charles Herty Foundation.

The action was taken during a busy day of conferences and addresses.

Editors unanimously urged the assembly and Governor Rivers to preserve the work done by the Herty foundation, "which has made such a contribution to the welfare of Georgia forestry interests and also to the newspaper industry generally."

John N. Moore, president of the Georgia Press Association, forwarded the resolution to officials and the Governor during the afternoon.

The Rukeyser address commanded the spotlight on the second day of the twelfth annual session of the Georgia Press Institute as

Dewey Leads Hopkins for '40

Nationwide Popularity Derby Shows Republican 'Hypothetical' Candidate Favored at This Time.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—In the first of a series of experiments to test the vote-pulling strength at this time of various possible candidates for 1940, the American Institute of Public Opinion has just completed a survey asking voters to indicate their choice if the two rival candidates for President happen to be Harry L. Hopkins, secretary of commerce, and Thomas E. Dewey, New York's battling Republican district attorney.

This speculative test—an informal popularity derby with 16 months remaining for voters to change their minds—shows Dewey favored over Hopkins at this time by approximately 3 to 2 among voters who expressed a definite choice. About one-fifth said they

Dr. Gallup Arrives Today for Speeches

A nationally known figure, whose predictions of political, economic and social trends have amazed millions of readers and established his name as a household word, will be in Atlanta today as a guest of The Constitution and will address a dinner forum of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce at 6:30 o'clock tonight at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

He is Dr. George H. Gallup, founder and director of the American Institute of Public Opinion. After speaking here he will go to Athens where he will address the Georgia Press Institute as a special guest of the newspaper.

In his address tonight Dr. Gallup will outline "Current Trends in Public Opinion."

Dr. Gallup perhaps is best known for the accuracy with which his organization has forecast recent national elections. Because of this his fame soared to dizzy heights almost overnight.

ECONOMY NEARLY BITES SPONSORS

Sabados Seeks Savings, Effort to Remove Wife From Pay Roll Follows.

The economy wave sweeping over the legislature got the house itself yesterday and almost took in some of the members' wives.

Representative George Sabados, of Dougherty county, a leader in the economy drive, sponsored and obtained passage of a resolution barring inspection trips by house committees—usually described as "junkies"—only to have it followed by another resolution which would have ousted Sabados' wife from the legislative pay roll. She is in charge of the stenographic bureau set up for the duration of the session.

Pay Roll Attack.

Representatives Pat Campbell, of Newton county, and H. B. Edwards, of Lowndes, economists in their own right, sponsored two resolutions aimed to remove Mrs. Sabados as well as Mrs. Harley Jones, wife of the Brantley county member, from the house pay roll.

The Campbell resolution was tabled and Edwards withdrew his after those supporting it had obtained a roll call vote.

"Because I feel that I am personally embarrassing a fellow member I ask leave to withdraw my resolution," Edwards told Speaker Roy V. Harris as the roll call was being taken.

Mrs. Sabados has been in charge of the stenographic bureau since its inception at the organization of the assembly. Mrs. Jones is her assistant.

"If the members feel they want to vote for this resolution and run my wife off the job it is all right with me," Sabados told the house. "The fact that she has been out there in the stenographic bureau has not kept me from saying what I want to say. But I will say that if this resolution is passed I will insist upon its strict enforcement, and I will insist that the wives of other members now on the state pay roll have their names removed from the rolls."

Edwards, before withdrawing his motion, declared that he felt the members should "approach the economy drive with clean hands."

Mother Who Routed Thief Is Crack Shot

Handling Weapons Runs in Family; Won't Be 'Scared' Next Time.

A 24-year-old Atlanta mother, who defended her home and children by routing a negro intruder with two shots from a .32-caliber pistol, disclosed yesterday that "handling weapons runs in her family."

With her four sons, the eldest of whom is eight, clustered about her, the mother, Mrs. Marvin C. Green, of 947 Katherwood drive, wife of a federal narcotic agent, related her experience of early Wednesday morning.

"My husband was out of town," she said, "I was asleep in my room, and the children were asleep in their room. For protection, I always keep a pistol under my pillow."

"I heard a noise in the basement. So I got the pistol and cautiously opened the door of my room. I listened a while, and then

'Carlota,' British Poetess, Grows Lyrical About City

Wealthy Mrs. Louis Oppenheimer Doing Book: 'America O. K. by Me.'

By YOLANDE GWIN.
Viewing Atlanta for the first time, "Carlota," the visiting British poetess, was constrained to pause for a moment last night and work out the beginnings of a poem that she intends to do about the city:

"The great Phoenix from the dying ashes,
The lovely city of Atlanta rose.
Each day among the trees, new buildings spring,
And like an opening flower the city grows."

That's the way it strikes her just now. She intends to work it all out later on, because Atlanta, she feels, really deserves a first-class poem. But what with hopping here and there, viewing this and that breathlessly under the guidance of Mrs. C. F. (Chuck) Palmer, she was sort of done in diets used to be a major chore. But nowadays mothers can enjoy hours of extra time.

The latest labor saver is complete Junior Dinner in one can—chopped beef or chopped lamb with chopped vegetables, rice and barley. This Junior Dinner may be served alone or with a portion of one of the canned chopped vegetables—chopped beef, spinach, greens or carrots. With chopped prunes or apple sauce and two kinds of soup—chopped liver or chopped vegetables—mothers can give their toddlers the complete range of variety pediatricians usually recommend, and, best of all, mothers can produce these special meals for the toddler with less than five minutes kitchen duty per meal.

RECIPE CONTEST.
The blanched leaf-stalks of celery are eaten in salads and as a vegetable.

No part of the celery should be wasted. Use the leafy tops as decorations on a platter, and tied together with a string so as to be able to take them out easily, use them for flavor in soups. The coarser, outside stalks may be cut fine and used in stews, soups, etc., and the hearts of the celery are delightful as entrees when stuffed with fish pastes or creamed cheese.

Try this new idea for a vegetable dish. It's guaranteed to add glamour to any meal.

Creamed Celery and Almonds.
4 cups sliced celery.
3 tbsp. butter.
1/2 tsp. salt.
1/2 cup water.

1 cup irradiated evaporated milk.
1 cup shredded blanched almonds.
Place celery, butter and salt in a saucepan. Cover closely and simmer until celery is tender. Add flour. Stir to blend well, then add water and milk. Bring slowly to a boil and boil 1 minute, or cook over boiling water for 10 minutes. Add almonds. Yield: 6 servings.

Mrs. Bell Driskell, Juliette, Ga., sends her favorite celery recipe, Meat Cakes Deluxe. The vegetables, crackers and cream of tomato soup give a new flavor to this universal favorite.

1/2 lb. round steak ground.
1 tablespoon melted shortening.

1 small onion sliced and sautéed with melted butter.
1 cup cracker crumbs.
1 can of cream of tomato sauce, paprika, salt, 1/2 cup sliced celery (finely).
Combine meat, flavorings, shortening, crumbs and onions with enough warm water to make a soft mixture. Form into cakes, and brown them on both sides in a little fat. Put them in a casserole and pour over them the heated soup and bake in oven about one hour. Serves six.

Leftovers are combined in the recipe suggested by Mrs. O. E. Hardegree, 507 East Harvard avenue, College Park, and made into a deliciously browned morsel that melts in your mouth. Celery is an important ingredient, adding pliancy and flavor.

Mrs. Hardegree's Delicious Vegetable Croquettes.

1 cup cooked black-eye peas (cold).
1 cup celery, cut fine.
4 medium white potatoes, boiled.
1 teaspoon each of salt and black pepper.
Dash cayenne pepper.
1 egg—beaten.
Use leftover peas if available. Boil potatoes in jackets, cool and mash. Wash, scrape and dice celery stalks very fine. Mix well, add seasonings. Shape into croquettes, dip in slightly beaten egg, then fine bread crumbs as any croquette. Fry in deep hot fat until dish and garnish with dill.

A New Note for Lent—Vegetable and Tuna Pie

To serve a substantial, savory supper dish, blend vegetable soup with tuna fish flakes and bake with a fluting of mashed potatoes for a frilly topping. It makes a Lenten menu like something pretty special when you serve this fine dish like this to your family.

Vegetable and Tuna Pie With Potato Topping.

Drain oil from, then flake two seven-ounce cans tuna fish. Combine, blending well, two tablespoons melted fat or drippings, three tablespoons flour. Cook until bubbling. Add one medium (16-ounce) can vegetable soup and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add fish and one-half teaspoon salt.

Pour into casserole and cover with a fluting of mashed potatoes around edge, leaving center uncovered. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F) 10 to 12 minutes or until potatoes are browned. (Serves four.)

Peas, celery and potatoes may be put through food chopper, using medium blade.

Baked Apple Dumplings.

Pare and core apples. Make rich pastry, roll out and cut into strips to fit around apples, leaving the top open. Fill the core space in the apples with brown sugar, margarine and nutmeg. Place dumplings in muffin (margarined) pan in order to hold shape. Sprinkle with sugar and margarine and bake. Serve with hard sauce.

Cherry Upside-Down Cake.

2 1/2 cups pitted sour cherries (1 No. 2 can).
1/3 cup shortening.
1/2 cup sugar.
1 egg.
1/2 cup bran.
1/2 cup grated orange rind.
2 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch.
2/3 cup sugar.
1/2 cup orange juice.
1/2 cup milk.
1/2 cup flour.
2 teaspoons baking powder.
1/2 teaspoon salt.
1/2 teaspoon soda.

Drain cherries. Combine cornstarch and sugar. Add juice and cherries; stir until smooth. Cook stirring until thick and clear. Add cherries and pour into buttered baking pan.

Cream shortening and sugar thoroughly, add egg and beat well. Stir in bran, orange rind, orange juice and milk. Sift flour with baking powder, salt and soda; add to first mixture and stir only until flour disappears. Spread batter over cherries and bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) about 35 minutes. Turn upside down on plate while hot. Serve with whipped cream if desired. Yield: 9 servings (1 pan 8 1/2 inches in diameter).

Tomato Bisque.

1/2 cup stale bread crumbs.
No. 2 can tomatoes.
1 small onion.
6 cloves.

House Committee Opposes Three Liquor Law Changes

Temperance Group Votes Adversely on Edwards Measures; One Would Restore Prohibition, Another Set Up State Stores.

The house temperance committee yesterday voted adversely on the three bills before it to change Georgia's liquor law.

One would have restored prohibition, a second would have set up a system of state stores while the third would have made the state a liquor wholesaler and permitted the private retail stores to continue in operation.

The committee acted without debate. Representative Spence Grayson, of Chatham county, moved for the unfavorable report as soon as the bills had been read and, although no roll call was taken, there were several votes against his motion.

Representative Edwards, of Lowndes, author of the bills providing for the changes in the present setup, was not present at the meeting. He was conducting a meeting of the committee on the state of the republic of which he is chairman.

"The committee promised it would not take up my bills during my absence," Edwards said when informed of the action. "I will carry them to the floor of the house. I believe one of them should be adopted."

Representative Randall Evans, of McDuffie, author of the dry bill, likewise was not in attendance at the meeting which was presided over by Chairman A. A. Marshall, of Macon county.

GEORGIAN LOSES FIGHT ON FLORIDA PROJECT

TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 23.—(P)—Federal Judge Alexander Akerman today set aside an order restraining the city of Bradenton from continuing with plans for water works construction. The judge had granted A. A. Turner, resident of Pelham, Ga., and a Bradenton property owner, an injunction against the city on February 15, but ruled today after a hearing that he lacked jurisdiction.

Turner contended city officials authorized a $268,090 PWA project for the "extension and improvement" of the existing water works, but charged the funds actually were to be used "to construct a definitely new and disinct water works." He contended that to do this an election of freeholders was necessary.

PENSION PLAN STUDIED.

WAYCROSS, Ga., Feb. 23.—Acting on instructions from the city commission, City Attorney Frank McDonald Jr. has launched a joint study with the board of education on a proposed pension system for all city employees.

REA FUNDS ALLOTTED.

HIAWASSEE, Ga., Feb. 23.—The Rural Electrification Administration has announced allocation of $8,000 to the Blue Ridge Electric Membership Corporation here to complete its project of 105 miles of rural power lines in Towns, Union and Fannin counties, Georgia, and Clay county, North Carolina. A total of $113,000 previously had been allotted.

WALLACE ADVISES COTTON BE PLACED IN WORLD TRADE

Should Be on Competitive Basis, Agriculture Secretary Says, Offering 3 Possible Methods.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(P)—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace suggested today that American cotton be placed on a "competitive basis" in world markets. He offered this suggestion to the senate agriculture committee which opened hearings on a variety of legislative proposals for dealing with the present cotton surplus.

Wallace did not directly detail how American cotton could meet competition of low-priced staple in the world market, but referred several times to the administration's program of subsidizing wheat exports.

Urges Speed.
At the same time he urged that whatever congress does in the way of cotton legislation, be done in a hurry.

Southern senators have been busy for nearly two months seeking some way to reduce the surplus of American cotton, of which more than 11,000,000 bales are piled up under government loans. When Wallace said that many other cotton producing nations faced cotton surpluses, seven senators inquired about the possibility of a world conference in an attempt to fix quotas of production for the world market.

"There has been purely informal consideration of such a conference," Wallace said. The secretary said, however, that such a conference would deal with the long-time problem and offered little solution for immediate questions.

Three Methods.
Wallace said there were three possible methods of dealing with the surplus problem: The present loan program could be maintained with the addition of some way of placing exports on a competitive basis; the loan program could be abandoned and farmers given a large enough benefit payment to maintain income; or domestic prices could be pegged at a high level and any surplus be allowed to flow into world markets for what it would bring.

Oscar Johnston, one-time adviser of Wallace, asserted that the huge government-loan stocks had caused a "sitdown strike by all cotton buyers."

Johnston, who said he testified for an overwhelming majority of producers, and the entire cotton industry, asked release of part of the stocks and an additional benefit or "adjustment payment" on this year's crop to encourage movement of cotton into markets instead of into loans.

The witness said there actually was a shortage of "free cotton" on the market because certain qualities of the staple needed were in the loan.

Senator Bankhead, Democrat, Alabama, disputed the market shortage statement, saying "You can get plenty of cotton by just raising your bids."

ing to $17,000,000 represented the entire income of every person, business and corporation west of the Mississippi river.

"Failure and derangement of private business furnished this excuse of the governments to make these terrific expenditures."

"I think there should be a ceiling on spending even while we are putting our national economy in shape to balance the budget again. "The remedy for the present situation is a diagnosis of the causes of private business ills. When the government attempts to provide for unemployed, it reduces their own standard of living in a long-range view, and cuts the standard of living for productive workers. "Although the United States has only about one-sixth of the world's population, there is a telephone for one person out of every seven and three-fourths of the automobiles of the world are owned by our citizens."

Highest Standard.
"We have the highest standard of living of any nation in the entire world, and that is due to the fact that our businessmen, industrialists and others are progressive. "What business of the nation has failed to do is to acquaint the people with the facts. They have failed to sell business—to tell the truth in simple language to the people."

"This failure has made business the prey of any politician demagogue who happened to come along. I did not mean to talk about politics, but politicians have stepped so much into your business and mine that one cannot discuss the national economic situation without talking about politics."

"When politicians make an attack on truthful newspaper advertising, they strike at the very life lines of the freedom of the press. We should 'audit' our news sources more, and edit and sell better newspapers. Sell the entire paper, not just a part of it."

Members of the board of managers of the association held a short meeting tonight. Rukeyser appeared today as the guest of the Atlanta Georgian.

He spoke in the morning on the "New Promise of American Life," and this afternoon on "Post-Depression America and the Press."

Newspaper Makeup.
Douglas C. McMurtrie, director of typography, Ludlow Typograph Company, Chicago, spoke during the morning on the makeup of a newspaper in aiding its sale and attractiveness. J. Roy McGinty, Calhoun Times, vice president of the association, presided at that meeting, and W. S. Kirkpatrick, managing editor of the Georgian, presided in place of Publisher Herbert Porter, who could not attend the Rukeyser addresses.

News photography held the center of the state in a roundtable discussion late this afternoon with Fred Moon, the Atlanta Journal; George Burt, the Macon Telegraph; Milton Hardy, the Gainesville News; Otis Brumby, the Cobb County Times; C. M. Methvin, the Eastman Times Journal; Harry B. Jennings, the Milledgeville Recorder; and Milton L. Fleetwood, the Carversville Tribune News, having spots on the program.

Ralph L. Ramsey, secretary of the Georgia Education Association, explained the better educational movement for Georgia which his organization is sponsoring.

"CRACKER CHATTER." Quick Topping for Casserole Dishes.

Instead of always a topping of crumbs try a topping of whole flaky saltine crackers. Sprinkled with cheese or dotted with butter and placed under low broiler heat until a delicious brown, this flaky topping does that certain something to a casserole dish.

Marguerites.

Beat one egg until stiff; gradually add 4 tablespoons powdered sugar. Add 1-8 teaspoon salt and 1-2 cup finely chopped nuts, meats and 1-2 teaspoon vanilla. Spread on saltine crackers and bake in a (300 degrees F.) oven for 15 minutes. Serve at once. Portion: 18 Marguerites.

Vanilla Wafer Pie Crust.

Crust: Line a 9-inch pie plate with small vanilla wafers standing a row around inside of pie plate to form edge. Fill in spaces between wafers with crumbled wafers. Turn chocolate cream filling or any preferred filling into vanilla wafer pie shell. Graham crackers may be used instead of vanilla wafers if preferred.

Toasted Tempters.

Spread crackers with lemon butter (a little lemon rind and lemon juice added to the butter) and toast for a few minutes under the broiler.

For Fruit Salads.

Spread flaky crackers with softened cream cheese, sprinkle with chopped nut meats. Serve with molded fruit salads.

Arne Rae, Chicago, executive secretary of the National Editorial Association, also will speak as a guest of the Fulton County Daily Report, Atlanta, and its editor, Frank Kempton.

A short business session of the association is slated, with Moore presiding, assisted by James C. Seymour, field manager.

Fisher also will speak at a luncheon meeting, and a roundtable discussion of "Pertinent Problems of the Present Day" will be led by Miss Emily Woodward, director of Georgia state forums. The Savannah Morning News and Evening Press will be hosts tomorrow night with Herschel V. Jenkins, publisher, presiding.

Members of the Georgia Collegiate Press Association also will hold a meeting with Miss Henrietta Green, presiding.

since the session began and I have not asked that they be put on the pay rolls as pages for this house and I do not intend to," Edwards said. "I do not think other members should have their relatives on the pay rolls while we are trying to save money."

$50,000 Saving.

Sabados said his resolution barring the junkets would save the house "upwards of $50,000." "I felt that such trips were all right when the state had money enough to pay for them," the Dougherty county member said. "However, we need the money for other things now and I never heard where one of these trips ever did the state any good."

The resolution barring the junkets was approved by a voice vote and State Treasurer George B. Hamilton was instructed not to pay any expense bills submitted for them.

Later the house reversed itself and with only a few dissenting votes approved a trip planned this week end by the penitentiary committee. Committee members said the cost would be "negligible."

MEXICO REFUSES PLANES FOR OIL

U. S. Ambassador Daniels Announces Nation Has Refused Nazi Offer.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 23.—(P)—United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels announced today Mexico had turned down a proposed trade of oil for 17 German commercial planes.

Daniels was understood to have personally voiced objections to the deal.

The ambassador was reported authoritatively to have expressed displeasure to the Mexican government over the proposed barter with its possible military ramifications, since the planes were of a type which could be converted into fighting craft.

Daniels and Colonel William Freehoff, United States military attaché, conferred with the new Mexican war secretary, Jose Agustin Castro, last week.

The visit was described as merely a formal call on a new cabinet minister, but speculation developed over whether the United States officials had discussed the proposed German purchase with Castro at that time.

It was understood that W. R. Davis, New York oil man who two months ago negotiated a $17,000,000 oil deal with Mexico under which Germany would get most of the oil, had been here trying to arrange the plane deal.

Davis was registered recently at a hotel at which a German, believed to be a representative of a Junkers aircraft firm, also was staying. Both, however, were believed to have left Mexico City.

year, will be only about 13 miles, it was indicated.

Representative Fowler said yesterday he would favor elections in both Douglas and Fulton counties, if the move to annex the smaller county is undertaken.

Fulton officials were said not to favor the proposal, but none had made a public statement.

Two counties have in recent years been annexed to Fulton—Milton and Campbell counties.

Douglas borders Fulton on the western limit for a distance of about 20 miles along the banks of the Chattahoochee river. The most recent census gives it a population of 9,461, with its county seat, Douglasville, having a population of 2,316.

Winners in Gateway-to-Hollywood Contest

Virginia Brown and Ralph F. Ellis Selected in Talent Search Here

Chosen by Film Experts From 30 Atlanta Contestants for Opportunity To Appear in Radio Production and in RKO Movie, "Career."

Two young Atlanta people are nearer to Hollywood today, perhaps, than they have ever been in their lives.

From early morning yesterday, Bryant Washburn, movie actor; Arthur Willi, chief casting director for RKO, and their Gateway-to-Hollywood committee held auditions and listened to carefully rehearsed lines assigned young hopefuls in The Constitution-Jesse Lasky search for talent.

At 1 o'clock there was a break, during which the 30 contestants and 70 prominent Atlantans were entertained at luncheon in the Henry Grady hotel, the guests of Mr. Lasky and RKO.

Dialogue Auditions. Then there were further auditions—and further reading of lines—this time in dialogue.

Finally, there were three young men and three young women left in the running—Misses Martha Skeen, Jeanne Flynn and Virginia Wynn Brown; Paul Carpenter Jr., Don Tyler and Ralph F. Ellis.

Will just had to eliminate two couples, since only one young man and one young woman could be selected in Atlanta, but he found it a very difficult task to decide which two it should be.

Relics of Old Issues Dating From Stagecoach Days May Bring You Bid to a Dinner Party.

By LILLIE MAY ROBINSON.

Threescore and eleven years ago The Atlanta Constitution was less than a year old and the last stagecoach carrying United States mail had not driven out of Atlanta into oblivion!

Seventy eventful years ago this newspaper was a lusty young champion of the cause from which it derives its proud name. In those post-war days the constitution of these states, so shortly reunited by the unhappy shedding of blood, was a hollow mockery among the people of this state, a people without a voice, out of the silence of despair. The Atlanta Constitution was born, a veritable voice in the wilderness which grew into a clarion of liberty.

W. A. Hemphill, himself a Confederate veteran, was the publisher of The Constitution then, partner to his father-in-law, G. H. Anderson, who had acquired the paper from its founder, Colonel W. Styles. The men of The Constitution of those days were courageous and they did much to lift the voice of a sacred cause in a land hard-ridden by unendurable conditions following the War Between the States. It is an enviable heritage and one which this paper has tried to preserve, throughout its 71 years of service to the people of the south.

Still Important.

Seventy-one years is a long time in this new world. Seventy-one years ago, Atlanta, a vigorous young railroad town, was striving to arise from its own ashes. The stagecoach was still an important factor in the daily life of the town. With the railroads still feeling war wounds, the horse stagecoach was still a common sight. The stagecoach was still a common sight. The stagecoach was still a common sight.

True the "iron horse" had replaced old "Dobbin" on the main routes to the north, the coast and the south, but those who sought haven, new homes and new life, the stagecoach was still a common sight. The stagecoach was still a common sight. The stagecoach was still a common sight.

How long has this paper been delivered into your home—or that of your grandparents? Have you a clipping or a page from an old issue of The Constitution? How old is your treasure? A treasure of possession—perhaps very yellow with age and very fragile.

It makes no difference to whom the clipping or page belongs, if you bring or send it to the Stagecoach Editor of The Constitution, and it is one of the oldest, you will be invited to a party next Thursday evening.

The Atlanta Constitution will soon be 71 years old, so for every year of its life, there will be a guest. There will be a dinner party entertaining these 71 people, after which the party will be taken to Loew's Grand for a special Constitution preview of Walter Wagner's "Stagecoach," which will show the public on the following day, March 3.

Look through your attic. Ask your grandparents to get down their old albums. In short, ransack your house and the houses of your relatives for an old copy of The Constitution. It need not be 71 years old. After all, one much, much later might come an invitation to the party. And all will be saved, intact, and returned.

can, Oregon, said that the Guam improvements were needed to provide a base for scouting enemy naval operations from the air.

"No one expects Guam to be defended," he said, "but it might be the means of holding up an attack on the United States or its possessions for a month, three weeks or one week. If we could hold up the attack for one day, the expenditure for Guam would be well worth the price."

Representative Maas, Republican, Minnesota, argued that giving up the Guam project would only as a "preventive measure."

Representative Magnuson, Democrat, Washington, told the house that Japan had been fortifying Pacific islands, in some places less than 700 miles from the tip of the Aleutian (Alaskan) archipelago.

"If we object to the Guam proposal," he added, "they are going to say 'here again is a great nation that is afraid to dredge a harbor because we, the imperial Japanese government, might protest.'"

Representative Robison, Republican, Kentucky, asserted that naval authorities were in agreement that "this is not necessary to promote national defense. The dangers of the United States are not external," he added, "but internal, and the money would better be spent to bring about a reduction of unemployment."

Representative Mott, Republican, Kentucky, asserted that amount to "a surrender to the dictators." He said that to say the project would provoke a war was "all nonsense and twaddle."

The bill now goes to the senate, where a house-approved measure authorizing an outlay of $358,000,000 for national defense is already pending. This sum is to go largely for an expansion of the army air corps, both in planes and men. The measure yesterday received the unanimous approval of the senate military affairs committee. Both bills are integral parts of President Roosevelt's big rearmament program.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY VISITED BY CLARK

United States Senator Bennett Champ Clark paid a brief visit to the state senate and house of representatives yesterday.

Major Clark Howell, editor and publisher of The Constitution, accompanied the Missouri senator to the general assembly as the senator was enroute from Athens, where he addressed the Georgia Press Association, to Washington.

Senator Clark paid his respects from the rostrum of each house, after being presented by the chair.

DIVERSION OF ROAD MONIES REFUSED

plying the 20 per cent cut to allocated funds—revenues to state departments for specific purposes not included in general funds—Harris asserted schools, old-age pensions, eleemosynary institutions and the health department are the first to suffer when revenues fall short of appropriations.

"All I'm asking is that you raise taxes for whatever you put into the bill," he continued.

Failure to slash the budget 20 per cent will necessitate a sales tax, Harris warned the house, and asserted a three per cent sales levy would raise no more than $8,500,000 and that it would have to be in addition to all other taxes, changing none of the present levies.

Harris, who has emphasized that he approves the Rivers program, full, explained it would be better to cut out with appropriations of 80 per cent rather than with a high appropriation which later would have to be cut, and cited present operations on a 56 per cent budget. His cut would be applied to figures in the bill up for consideration.

Harris said he would favor 20 per cent reductions all along the line except for Highway Department funds, where he feared danger to federal funds, and the eleemosynary institutions.

From the time of Harris' speech, the house rode down the line of his recommendations voting slash after slash in the budget.

After whacking the Department of Agriculture's old allocation of 97 per cent of all fees, rents, sales, etc., collected by the division, to 80 per cent, the house included a provision that a $6,000,000 reallocation to the State Board of Pharmacy be turned to promotion of new uses for cotton, on motion by Representative W. H. Lovett, of Laurens county.

The Department of Entomology was cut from last year's appropriation of $78,000 to $60,000, the forestry division from $95,300 to $75,000 and the Natural Resources Department from the old 97 per cent allocation recommended by the appropriations committee to 77 per cent.

Similar slashes were the 1939 appropriation of the division of mines from $60,000 to $48,000, parks from $50,000 to $40,000, buildings and grounds and cemeteries from $39,000 to $31,200 and the naval stores inspector to 77 per cent allocation.

Laws. In connection with the tax discussions, the assemblymen were asked to "put teeth" in current laws in a series of measures proposed by Representative Henderson Lanham, of the house ways and means committee and others.

Revenue Department measures of collecting delinquent taxes, the Lanham measures would:

1. Provide that no court could set aside a property sale for tax delinquency on the plea of excessive levy until the revenue department has paid the full amount of state, county and local taxes and accrued costs.

2. Permit the state revenue commission to issue executions against county tax collectors to force payment of the state's part of taxes on tax delinquent property.

3. To provide that proportionate parts of personal taxes must be paid to clear title to real property.

4. Legalize a single publication of a tax delinquency notice, plus the posting of a notice on the courthouse door by the sheriff.

Economy Fight Pushed. The house continued its economy battle on the appropriations committee by trimming the revenue department's allocations to 80 per cent of that fixed by law. The appropriations committee had recommended a 97 per cent allocation. The banking department also was trimming to an 80 per cent allocation basis.

There was a sharp exchange over the operating cost of the labor department. The appropriations committee had recommended the labor department be granted $25,000 for operating costs.

Representative Cicero Kendrick, of Fulton, labor leader, took the floor to recommend that the figure be trimmed to $20,000, charging "the department of labor does not function for the people but for the politicians and the legislature would not go far wrong if it abolished the department."

Representative Preston Rawlins, of Telfair county, counter-attacked, asserting, "I am tired of labor, labor, labor, trying to run everything and to grab everything. They give Talmadge."

House Appropriation Cut. The house voted in favor of Kendrick's amendment trimming the appropriation $5,000. "These are the greediest bunch I ever saw," Rawlins charged that Kendrick's attack on the $25,000 proposal was motivated by a personal dislike for Labor Commissioner Ben Huie and former Governor E. B. Edwards, the house voted to trim the appropriations committee recommendation of a $60,000 fund for operating costs of the military department to $56,000.

The house also cut the Public Service Commission allocation on recommendation of Harris and Edwards. The appropriations com-

Wreckage of Plane in Which Two Men Died

Here, in the tangled and riven limbs of the tree which halted its lowering flight, lies the wreckage of the plane in which Harry C. Clair and J. C. Owens, of Rome, plunged to their deaths yesterday in LaFayette. What remains of the plane's tail lies at the right.

Georgia Congressmen Divided, 5-5, In Vote on Guam Naval Air Base

Vinson Triumphs in Overwhelming Passage of Amended Bill—Declines Comment on German Press Barrage Against House Speech.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—The Georgia delegation divided evenly today in the fight to strike the controversial $5,000,000 Guam item from the administration-sponsored $53,800,000 air defense bill which Representative Carl Vinson, of Milledgeville, chairman of the naval affairs committee, successfully piloted through the lower house after three days of debate.

Delegation members joining forces with Vinson in his efforts to have the Guam harbor developments retained were Representatives Cox, of Camilla; Ramspeck, of Atlanta; Tarver, of Dalton, and Whelchel, of Gainesville. Voting for an amendment to eliminate the item from the measure were Representatives Brown, of Elberton; Owen, of Griffin; Peterson, of Ailey; Page, of Americus, and Gibbs, of Jesup.

Nazi Attack Vinson. Representative Vinson had no comment to make on the rejection of the controversial item, but manifested keen pleasure over the overwhelming vote by which the chamber later passed the amended bill. The fact that only four members out of 372 voting cast their ballots against final passage was regarded as a distinct tribute to the Georgia congressman's leadership.

German attacks on the Georgian congressman declined to comment on cable dispatches from Berlin telling of attacks made on him by the German press because of his speech before the house at the opening of debate Tuesday, citing the air defense bill as America's answer to dictator governments.

German attacks on the Georgian given prominent display in Washington newspapers today were summarized as follows:

"Commenting on Representative Vinson's statement in the house Tuesday that the United States must stand by Great Britain and France, the newspapers said that the speech primarily served a political purpose—convincing the misery which the Roosevelt regime has been unable to mollify."

"The Voelkischer Beobachter, Nazi party newspaper, said: 'Vinson, together with other irresponsible war mongers, demands a return to old-fashioned principles because America, though carrying the democratic burden, was able to collect the money of the world in its vaults.'"

Cites Unemployment. "The Lokalanzeiger said: 'The Roosevelt regime is as old as the National Socialist (Nazi) regime in Germany, but where Germany banished unemployment, the bitterest misery rules as regards large numbers of American people. . . . Nowhere does the inter-about 130 veterans still living, would call for no tax and would increase the pay roll approximately $31,200 a year.

The measure would not increase the present $30 per month pensions paid 1,271 widows of Confederate veterans. The veterans now receive $30 also.

Representative Edwards, of Lowndes, chairman, announced the house committee on the state of the republic would hold a hearing after the house adjourns Monday to consider, among other bills, one which would repeal the measure which created the State Hospital Authority. This bill was offered by Representative John C. Parker, of Colquitt, floor leader, and others. It followed the fight over the Robert & Company contract with the State Department of Public Welfare.

Brooks Urges Georgia To Ratify Bill of Rights. A proposal that Georgia ratify the constitutional bill of rights would be introduced in the state senate today by Senator J. E. Brooks, of Camilla.

The senator read recently in a national magazine that Georgia, Massachusetts and Connecticut are the only three states in the Union having failed to ratify the first ten amendments to the constitution, which form the bill of rights. Brooks promptly got Attorney General Ellis Arnall to draw up a bill to accomplish the long-neglected ratification. Massachusetts has a ratifying bill pending in its legislature also.

2 ROME MEN KILLED IN CRASH OF PLANE

Craft Strikes Pine Thicket Inside City Limits of LaFayette.

LA FAYETTE, Ga., Feb. 23.—(P)—Apparently losing control of their plane while stunting over a cemetery here today, two men were killed when the light two-place training ship crashed in a pine thicket.

They were Harry C. Clair, 38, mechanic, who is believed to have been at the controls of the ship, and J. C. Owens, 35, filling station employee, both of Rome, Ga. Bob Lane, La Fayette policeman, said they were "stunting" about 300 or 400 feet above the cemetery when the plane "went into a right turn and then dived down into the trees."

Owens was thrown clear of the plane. The body of Clair was found in the almost demolished cabin of the ship.

Russell Young, civil aeronautics authority inspector of Birmingham, investigated the accident but declined to comment on his findings.

The plane, owned by Clair, took off from the Rome airport shortly after 10 o'clock this morning, officials there stated, headed for Chattanooga.

went to the basement door. I opened it, and saw the figure of a man at the bottom of the steps.

"I fired once. He groaned and fell."

At that point, her husband, who had hurried home when informed of the incident, interrupted: "That's where you made your mistake. You should have fired again, right quick, and finished him."

"Kind of Scared," said Mrs. Green, continuing her narrative, "because I was kind of scared and nervous and didn't fire again until after the man got to his feet and went toward the window."

The intruder gained the window and escaped.

"I had a hard job falling asleep again, after I fired the pistol," Mrs. Green continued. "But the next time anything like that happened, I wouldn't be scared, because of this experience."

Mrs. Green said she "was used to weapons all her life" and that her mother, Mrs. Annie J. Yawn, of Jacksonville, Fla., was an expert shot.

"My mother has shot many a wild turkey, and other game in the Florida swamps," she said. "She taught me how to use a pistol and rifle."

In addition, Mrs. Green said she often went to the Fort McPherson pistol range with her husband, and that, at the coast resorts, she and her husband often "took pot shots at bottles on the crests of waves."

As for defending her home and family, Mrs. Green said: "I'd do anything to protect my children."

Billing's Pardon Opposed By State Advisory Board

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Feb. 23.—(UP)—The State Advisory Board late today, by a 3-2 vote, refused to recommend a pardon for Warren K. Billings, convicted with Thomas J. Mooney in the Preparedness Day bombing of 1916.

"Outside of lard and butter," he asserted, "there were available here in 1938, 4,614,000 pounds of fats and oils (domestic and foreign). Of this amount, 1,827,000 pounds were imported, principally from the Philippines."

"Again, all farm machinery is protected by high tariffs. The south is discriminated against on freight so unfairly that farm machinery can be shipped to South America cheaper than it can be shipped from United States factories to Savannah, Ga. On account of these protective tariffs, farmers of Brazil buy farm machinery at about half what it costs our southern farmers. In addition to these inequalities, American capital is being used to develop cotton in Brazil."

The house also cut the Public Service Commission allocation on recommendation of Harris and Edwards. The appropriations com-

Gains Made by Atlanta Artists To Be Demonstrated in Spring Show at Museum

CITY HAS FORGED TO THE FOREFRONT IN SOUTHERN FIELD

Three Local Organizations Given Credit for Great Strides Made in Period of Few Years.

Not so many years ago artists called Atlanta the Sahara of American art production. Today, civic leaders say, the situation is entirely changed, and Atlanta is now recognized by critics and patrons alike as the center of southern art.

Credit for this forging ahead in artistic production and appreciation is given to two local organizations, the Atlanta Artists Guild and the Studio Club. They number among their members many leading Atlanta painters, sculptors and etchers.

High Museum Work. Behind these two organizations is the High Museum of Art. Founded by the late Mrs. Joseph Madison High, noted philanthropist and art patron, the museum has been quietly working for many years to bring Atlanta to the fore as a southern art center.

Next Wednesday these three mutually-beneficial organizations will unite to bring the city the third annual spring show of Atlanta artists, at the High Museum. Sponsored by the guild and the club, local painters, print-makers, art engravers and etchers will demonstrate visually to the public the strides that have been taken. Their work will be on exhibition two weeks.

Southern Recognition. Many of the pieces to be on exhibition have won acclaim at other shows. Outstanding among the southern exhibitions that are marked by the presence of Atlanta talent is the Southern States Art League show, held the last time in Montgomery, Ala. Several pieces given awards in this show will be displayed Wednesday.

In the representative collection at the New York World's Fair will be several Atlanta canvases. In the field of sculpture, the south will have only one representative—Julian Harris, of Atlanta.

Harris' bust of a typical southern negro worker will be exhibited. He is an instructor at Georgia Tech.

In San Francisco, Maurice Siegler, well known for mural and portrait work, has been designated the southern artist most outstanding in small murals. Siegler is art director of Brenau College.

Bird Studies. Mrs. Herbert D. Oliver, of 3100 Habersham road, has been specializing in water colors of native Georgia birds, which have attracted the attention of Dr. John B. May, president of the American Audubon Society, who recently came from New York to examine her work. When he had seen only two pieces he exclaimed: "These are the best bird studies being done anywhere in the world!"

Among the young artists being developed in Atlanta is Miss Kitty Butler. Miss Butler studied here under Siegler in the city and at Oglethorpe University.

She is only 24 years old, but already is being spoken of as "that very talented young painter" in art shows over the south.

Frank Mack's work has also attracted wide attention. Lewis P. Skidmore, director of the High Museum, has invited Atlanta artists to attend the spring show.

Stork Beats Ambulance In Vicinity of Five Points

The stork defeated an ambulance racing for Grady hospital by a few blocks yesterday afternoon—and a son was born to Mrs. James Upton, of 829 Neal street, northwest.

R. W. Verner, driving a J. Allen Couch ambulance, said he heard a lusty cry as the machine crossed Five Points.

"I just stepped on the gas," said Verner. Mother and baby are "doing fine."

HAVE YOU ACID INDIGESTION?

If you are troubled with acid indigestion, sour risings, gassy stomach, or heartburn, you want to help improve your digestion. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery stimulates the appetite and has a tendency to increase the flow of gastric juice and thus aid in improving the digestion and assimilation of food, and so help supply the body with strength and energy. Mrs. Mary Bullock, 915-37th St., N.E., Birmingham, says: "As a tonic and to relieve upset stomach caused by excess acidity, we have found Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery very beneficial." Ask your druggist today for it in liquid or tablet form. See how much more vigorous and "peppy" you feel after taking this tonic.

Julian Harris, with his wife ("my most severe critic") are hard at work finishing the latest of his series of negro heads. Others in the series have brought him national acclaim. One, the first, is to be exhibited at the New York World's Fair—the only piece of sculpture by a southern artist to be so honored. Harris is an instructor at Georgia Tech, and well known in Atlanta art circles.

Mrs. Robert J. Scott, 77, Passes; Was Beloved Pioneer Atlantan

Prominent in Deserving Civic Movements, She Moved to City in 1868 and Had Done Much Toward Its Betterment and Beautification.

Mrs. Robert J. Scott, one of Atlanta's best known and best loved pioneer citizens who had made her home here since the turbulent days of the Civil War, died yesterday morning at a private hospital after a brief illness. She was in her 78th year.

It was in the eventful year of 1868 when Atlanta became the capital of the state that the former Myra Henderson Sharpe, then a girl of 7, moved to the city which four short years previously had been destroyed by Sherman's army.

From that day up until the time of her fatal illness she was always closely identified with worthwhile civic movements which were seeking to build a new, finer and more beautiful Atlanta and her own career closely paralleled in many ways the growth of the small community into one of the great cities of the south.

Of Prominent Family.

Mrs. Scott was connected with some of Georgia's most prominent families. Her mother was the former Matilda Clark Cogburn, Putnam county, and her father was the late Augustus Baldwin Sharpe, a Baldwin county pioneer. Mr. Sharpe, who was one of the founders of Mercer University and also of the First Baptist church of Atlanta. He also was instrumental in organizing the Friendship First Baptist church, the first negro Baptist church in the city, and presented the congregation with its first 100 song books.

News of her death came as a distinct shock to her devoted friends in Atlanta and throughout the state who for years had regarded her with sincere admiration and respect.

On Sunday she attended church as usual and Monday morning she spent at her favorite diversion, working in the flower garden of her home, 50 Woodcrest avenue, in Brookwood Hills, which has long been regarded as one of the showplaces of that section.

Stricken Monday.

Monday afternoon she was stricken unexpectedly and Tuesday morning she was rushed to a hospital. She died at 5:15 o'clock yesterday morning.

She is survived by her husband; a daughter, Mrs. Myra Scott Eastman; a son, Robert H. Scott, vice president of the Eastman-Scott Advertising Agency; a sister, Mrs. I. W. Wingo, of Tigerville, S. C.; a granddaughter, Lula Bell Scott, and a grandson, Robert H. Scott Jr.

Like her father, Mrs. Scott also devoted a life time of service to the Baptist church, which she joined at the age of 9. Years ago she was a member of the Second Baptist church. She transferred her membership to the Ponce de Leon Baptist church at the time it was founded and when the two were combined, she continued her connection at the new location on Peachtree road, remaining constantly active in women's work up until her death.

In addition to her membership in the Women's Missionary Society, she always took a prominent part in the affairs of the Hapeville Orphan's home.

Lover of Flowers.

Few persons have taken such an active role in beautification projects. An ardent lover of flowers, Mrs. Scott for years had been a member of the garden division of the Atlanta Woman's Club and also of the Brookwood Hills Garden Club. She worked in her own garden almost daily.

During her school years here, Mrs. Scott specialized in the study of music and among her other accomplishments was widely known for her unusual vocal ability. Although she devoted little time to her singing in recent years, she was prominent in local musical circles while a young woman.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Spring Hill by Dr. Ryland Knight and Dr. M. Ashby Jones. Pallbearers will be Owen Perry, N. C. Eubanks, George Marchmont, Hugh Watson, E. Ralph Paris, M. E. Kilpatrick and Herbert L. Miles.

Burial will be in Oakland cemetery under direction of H. M. Patterson & Son.

MINE IS BLAMED FOR MYSTERY 'SOS'

No Trace of Vessel Found; U. S. Navy Theory Is Voiced.

CHATHAM, Mass., Feb. 23.—(P)—A United States navy opinion that a straying mine from the Spanish war zone was responsible for the frantic call "SOS—torpedoed" from an unnamed vessel south of the Azores, tonight left still unsolved the strange mystery of the ship's identity and the fate of her crew.

Organized search for the vessel was abandoned during the day by two ships which rushed to the scene—the Canadian Pacific's Empress of Australia and the Greek steamer Mount Pelion. Neither sighted so much as a bit of floating wreckage.

Two days of search over the transatlantic radio lanes for some hint of the name of the vessel which signed its "SOS... torpedoed by unknown submarine" only with the unlisted call letters "PECC" also came to a fruitless standstill. Some United States shipping men held the opinion that another famous mystery of the sea had been written into the records.

Conjecture that the ill-fated vessel might have been the British tanker Pecten was ended when it was announced the Pecten was afloat, untroubled and en route to her destination. While trying to decipher the SOS message's unlisted signature "PECC," radiomen pointed out the letter "C" in international code stands for "ten."

Captain G. S. Bryan, chief of the navy hydrographic office, said his office was advised by radio January 27 that a mine had been sighted by the oil tanker California Standard about 600 miles southwest of the Azores. Officials of the department felt wind and tide might easily have carried the mine to the position given in the distress message, 360 miles south of the Azores.

THOMAS ANDERSON DIES OF INJURIES

Decatur Businessman Succumbs After Auto Crash Sunday.

Thomas Poole Anderson, prominent Decatur businessman and member of a well-known Georgia family, died in a private hospital yesterday of injuries received Sunday in an automobile accident between Lithonia and Conyers.

Although badly hurt when his car crashed into a highway truck, his condition at first was not considered serious. He suffered a relapse Wednesday night and did not rally.

A native of DeKalb county, Mr. Anderson was a grandson of the late Judge Adam Poole, and a son of the late "Uncle Tom" Anderson. He also was a nephew of the late A. Lamar Poole, former assistant chief of police.

Mr. Anderson was a member of the Elks' Club, Masonic lodge, Decatur Civic Club, Harold Byrd Post, American Legion, and the Shriners.

Funeral services are to be conducted at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in Trinity chapel, Decatur, by Dr. D. P. McGeachy and Dr. J. W. O. McKibben. Burial will be in the Decatur cemetery under direction of A. S. Turner & Sons.

Pallbearers will be Judge James C. Davis, Carlton Turner, H. H. Howard, Selman Threadgill, Judge John S. McClelland, H. F. George, Scott Candler and Sheriff Jake Hall.

LAW TO PREVENT CHILD BRIDES IN GEORGIA PASSED

Drastic Measure To Put 'Teeth' in Rules Against Marriage of Minors Awaits River's Signature

Spindle-legged, flat-chested "child brides" will no longer toddle to the altars in Georgia if Governor Rivers puts his signature of approval on a house-and-senate-adopted bill designed to "put teeth" into the law against the marriage of minors without the consent of parents.

The bill would change the present marriage law to allow parents to sue the county ordinary for damages if he should issue a marriage license without following the requirements of the law.

Georgia has not achieved the nation-wide fame for child marriages that has come to Tennessee and Kentucky, with their 10, 11, 12 and 13-year-old brides, but many cases of early marriages have come to light in this state.

Officials said there are many weddings where the brides are girls of an age too tender to undertake the responsibilities of marriage, but little has been done to prevent child weddings.

The present law charges clerks of the superior courts with the responsibility of instituting damage suits against offending ordinaries. The new act would shift this to the father or mother, or legal guardian of either contracting party.

Ordinaries would be subject to suit if they failed to post the required notices of application for license, if they knowingly issued a license when the girl involved resided in another county, failed to take proper precaution in inquiring as to minority, or violated the time notices must be posted before licenses may be granted.

The law now requires five days must elapse between application and granting of a license if the girl is between 18 and 21 and parental consent not given. During this interim a notice must remain publicly posted. If the girl is under 18 the ordinary cannot take application for a license without expressed parental consent.

When damages are recovered, the amount remaining after deduction of the plaintiff's attorney's fees, to be fixed by the trial judge, is to be divided equally between the suing party and the county educational fund.

The new act was sponsored by Representatives Luther Bloodworth, Benning Grace and B. F. Merritt Jr. of Bibb county. Bloodworth said "most credit goes to Ordinary W. C. Stevens, of Bibb, for his three years of tireless effort in sponsoring this bill, as he is on a salary basis and it means nothing to him financially."

Ordinaries on fee basis receive the money charged for marriage licenses.

Bloodworth said the purpose of the new bill was "not to provide for recovery in favor of the parent but to provide a weapon against the offending ordinary and to put teeth into the code section dealing with the wrongful issuance of a marriage license."

Police Recover Auto Stolen From Sleuths

The red faces of Detectives B. E. Blair and A. B. McNaughton assumed normal coloring early last night. A car stolen from them earlier in the day was recovered.

Patrolmen L. H. Satterfield and G. F. Barrett, in charge of the stolen car bureau, found the vehicle parked on Jones avenue, near Mangum street. Keys were in the vehicle, and half of the gasoline supply had been consumed.

The car was stolen from a parking place near the Fulton county courthouse, while the detectives were attending court.

effectiveness of advertising, but the poll has since received world-wide acclaim and is generally recognized as a barometer on how the public is thinking.

DEWEY IS FAVORED IN SURVEY ON 1940

had not made up their minds how they would vote in this hypothetical race.

The issue put to a cross-section of voters throughout the land was: "If Harry Hopkins runs for President in 1940 on the Democratic ticket against Thomas Dewey on the Republican ticket, which candidate would you prefer? The vote was:

Dewey 61% Hopkins 39%

The number who said they had not decided between the two candidates was 22 per cent. The heaviest no opinion vote was in the lower income groups where Democratic sentiment normally prevails.

If, following their Democratic leanings, most of these voters were to decide in favor of Hopkins, the race between the two candidates would be remarkably even.

Many Months Remain.

Much can happen between now and 1940 to affect the popularity of the two men. Harry Hopkins, who is said to be a favorite of the New Deal wing in the Democratic party, is just beginning his new task as secretary of commerce after many years in the difficult job of administering the WPA. He is addressing the nation over the air from Des Moines tomorrow night, and there are many months remaining in which his candidacy may be built up. Today's test is only a rough indication of his popularity before the 1940 race begins in earnest.

Last week an Institute survey conducted among Republican voters found Dewey the most popular single candidate for nomination among the GOP rank and file. In the hypothetical race between Dewey and Hopkins, the party vote divides as follows in today's survey:

Dewey Hopkins
Democrats 39% 61%
Republicans 96 4
Other party voters 59 41

It is noteworthy that Republican voters are much more in agreement on Dewey at this time than Democrats are in agreement on Hopkins.

Among voters in the upper and middle income groups sentiment for Dewey is strong, while in the lower income group, especially among persons on relief, Hopkins is the more popular.

Dewey Hopkins
Upper income group 80% 20%
Middle income group 66 34
Lower income group (including reliefers) 47 53
Reliefers only 40 60

In a companion question in the survey the institute sought to find what effect, if any, an endorsement by President Roosevelt might have on Harry Hopkins' popularity. This question read: "If President Roosevelt indorses Harry Hopkins for President in 1940 on the Democratic ticket and Thomas Dewey runs on the Republican ticket, which would you prefer?"

The results showed the same vote for Hopkins and for Dewey, both national and by parties, as when the question was worded without mentioning Roosevelt's indorsement. It is possible, however, that if the President actually indorsed Hopkins in a ringing statement, opinion might change and the present "undecided" vote swing to Hopkins.

All Leading Candidates. Between now and 1940 the Institute, through its nation-wide machinery for testing opinion, will run various prominent candidates against one another. It will pit Republican leaders against both conservative Democrats and New Dealers.

From these various tests the voting public will, for the first time, have a rough indication of the relative strength of opposing candidates before the campaign enters home stretch.

INSURGENTS DENY CLEMENCY PLEDGE TO LOYALIST HEADS

Unconditional Surrender Demand Is Reiterated to British Envoy by Nationalist Leaders.

BURGOS, Spain, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Spanish government leaders accused of murder or treason must face trial, the Nationalist government informed Britain tonight.

The reiteration of General Franco's four-point program at conclusion of the civil war was handed Sir Robert M. Hodgson, British agent, who had urged widespread clemency on behalf of government leaders holding out in the central zone.

Sir Robert had asked the Nationalists for a definite declaration on what those leaders could expect if they surrendered.

After Sir Robert saw the Nationalist foreign minister, General Count Francisco Gomez Jordana, the latter's office said the British representative was told that:

1. There would be no reprisals.

2. Persons guilty of crimes such as murder and treason must face the courts.

3. Those politically responsible for prolongation of the conflict would be subject to economic sanctions.

4. There must be an unconditional surrender.

The foreign office's reply to Hodgson appeared to remove all doubt that the civil war would be settled on any other terms than Franco's.

Hodgson said the inquiry was made to give the government side an idea of "what to expect."

British and French recognition formalities were expected here to go through despite rejection of Britain's suggestions.

In face of the Nationalists' clear-cut refusal to tolerate suggestions from outside powers, Senator Leon Berard, France's special envoy to Nationalist Spain, entered a conference with Count Jordana late tonight.

Hitler in his response thanked Franco and added:

"Germany and its army are happy that German volunteers were permitted to fight in your young and glorious army beside Italian comrades and thus were able to make a moderate contribution for the liberation of your land and the re-erection of a national and proud Spain."

PEARLS OF WISDOM

"Beware," says the Talmud, "of saying a thing of which you may later be ashamed."

"He who can feel ashamed will not readily do wrong."

"It is a good omen in a man to be capable of being ashamed."

Rabbi Janay, upon seeing a man giving charity in a public place, said: "Better hadst thou not given at all than have given alms so openly, and put the poor man to shame."

"Shame will often restrain that which the law does not prohibit."

"There is a great difference between him who is ashamed before his own self and him who is only ashamed before others."

"There is hope for a man who is capable of being ashamed."

DUAL CHURCH GOAL URGED BY SPEAKERS

Madras Delegates Say Political Propaganda Should Be Exposed.

The church today is faced with the task of exposing propaganda underlying international political situations as well as that of educating the people, and to the Christian nations fall the duty of bringing about universal peace, Atlantans were told last night by speakers at the Atlanta post-Madras conference at St. Mark Methodist church.

The speakers, delegates to the Madras International Missionary conference held last December at Madras, India, were Dr. Gonzalo Baez Camargo, director of religious education in Mexico; Miss Ilo Rea-vola Sircar, leader in the student Christian movement in India, and Dr. P. C. Hsu, of the University of Shanghai, China.

Present Impressions.

With Dr. Edward D. Grant, of Richmond, Va., executive director of the Committee on Religious Education and Publications of the Southern Presbyterian church, and Miss Sallie Lou McKinnon, of Nashville, of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, they arrived in the city yesterday to give their impressions of the international conference at the meeting here, sponsored by the Christian Council of Atlanta and the Foreign Missions Conference of North America.

The meeting last night climaxed a program which began with a ministers' conference in the morning at the First Baptist church, and meetings for Sunday school workers and young people and an open forum in the afternoon at St. Mark Methodist church.

Expropriation Decree.

Mexico's expropriation of oil properties was explained by Dr. Camargo, who urged his listeners to give the matter fair consideration. He explained it followed refusal of oil companies to abide by the decision of the Mexican supreme court and involved the matter of wages to be paid workmen.

"I do not maintain that the laborers were reasonable in all that they asked," he said, "but I do know that a newspaper reporter (L. J. DeBecker), hired by the companies to write biased articles in their favor, resigned in disgust over the situation and finally wrote a book on the true facts."

The church's obligation to attack imperialism and exploitation was stressed by Miss Sircar, who pointed out that the lands and resources of the world were unequally distributed and were a major reason for much human suffering.

Task of Christians.

Dr. Hsu elaborated the task facing Christians of bringing the teachings of Christianity to the cultivated people of his own race, and urged a close study of the beliefs of non-Christians in his country.

Women leaders of the church will have charge of the program at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. Mrs. L. M. Awtry will preside and speakers will be Miss McKinnon, Miss Sircar and Dr. Hsu. Mrs. S. G. Stukes, of All Saints' Episcopal church choir, will render several selections. The latter half of the session will be presided over by Mrs. H. C. Dean, with Miss McKinnon, Dr. Hsu and Dr. Camargo as speakers.

A "world day of prayer" program will be presented at 2:30 o'clock with Miss Sircar as the speaker. The soloist will be Mrs. Sam Johnson, of the First Christian church choir. Dr. Grant, Dr. Hsu and Dr. Camargo will address an interdenominational session at Gammon Theological Seminary at 3:30 o'clock, and will speak again before church officers and laymen at the village quartet, composed of Herbert White, H. A. Rauschenberg, W. N. Rauschenberg and N. J. Harmon, will sing.

Closing the conference will be an open session at 8 o'clock with Dr. Stauffer presiding. Speakers will be Dr. Grant, Miss Sircar, Dr. Hsu and Dr. Camargo. Music will be furnished by the quartet choir of the North Avenue Presbyterian church composed of William King, Miss Alicia Makinson, Miss Alice Hegwood and Garnett Trotter.

M'CALL RETAINS HIS HOPE FOR LIFE

Calm Despite Supreme Court Refusal to Intervene in Case.

RAIFORD, Fla., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Franklin Pierce McCall waited hopefully tonight for the word which would save him from the electric chair tomorrow, but late developments closed most avenues of escape for the kidnaper of James Bailey Cash Jr.

Two United States supreme court justices refused to stay the execution pending an appeal to the nation's highest tribunal and Judge Rufus E. Foster, senior judge of the United States court of appeals at New Orleans, again turned down McCall's attorneys.

There was still another setback for the 22-year-old youth who was snatched from the chair Monday slightly more than an hour before he was to have been electrocuted.

Assistant Attorneys General T. A. Norwood and Thomas J. Ellis said physicians reported a test disclosed McCall was not suffering from a serious venereal disease which might form the basis of a sanity hearing.

From unofficial but well-informed sources came word there would be no reprieve from Governor Cone.

L. F. Chapman, superintendent of the state prison farm here, said

McCall was "holding up okeh" in his death house cell.

The confessed abductor's mother, Mrs. Minnie McCall, was his only visitor during the day except for the physicians.

Chapman said he was calm today, apparently having regained his often-expressed confidence he would not be put to death for the crime.

ATLANTA, GA., FEBRUARY 24, 1939.

THE AMERICAN INFLUENCE

Most recent reports from competent observers in Europe indicate that the outcome of present international tensions there, the decision as to whether the old world is to be plunged into new war or continue to enjoy the blessings of peace, depends largely upon the attitude of the congress of the United States of America.

Like hesitant children, it appears, the nations who have talked most belligerently now wait nervously to see what will be the reaction of the American congress and public.

In a letter written only two days ago one of the most respected of all authorities on international political trends wrote, "Unless American diplomacy shows a decided isolationist trend (unexpected), its opinion will be a major factor in European councils and will play a leading role if Mediterranean affairs are settled at a new Munich."

Thus a world situation has come into being under which, whether they will or no, the American people are largely responsible for the history to be written in regions of the earth far distant from this continent.

It is believed, today, that no war in Europe is likely in the near future. No nation wishes to expose its people to the horrors of modern attack from the skies. The dictator nations lack finances, while the more strongly peace predisposed democracies have the money with which to forge the strongest of economic weapons.

It is stated, however, that the aggressive dictator nations are restrained, also, by their belief that the United States cannot be kept out of the ranks of their enemies should they launch unprovoked attack on the democracies of Europe, or should they indulge in an orgy of that war brutality known as "baby bombing."

How much of this belief is the result of President Roosevelt's more recent diplomatic policy, in which he has let it be known that this country's sympathies are overwhelmingly arrayed against the brutalitarian policies of the dictator nations, can only be estimated. His hint that affairs in Europe might necessitate a cutting short of his present cruise in the Caribbean sea is interpreted, in foreign diplomatic circles, as a reiteration for the purpose of strengthening the moral effect of his anti-dictatorship policy.

The world now waits for settlement of the problems stirred up in the Mediterranean. This may involve even more fundamental issues than those discussed at Munich. Yet there is, it seems, little chance that war will be the result.

Germany, contrary to alarmist reports, is not displaying any extraordinary military activity. It is hardly conceivable that Hitler would risk sending his people to war merely as an aid to Italy. Italy alone lacks both money and resources necessary for her to war, alone, against Britain or France, either singly or together.

There are, of course, reasonable arguments to be made in support of some of the Italian claims. Realist that he is, Prime Minister Chamberlain, of Britain, undoubtedly recognizes the justice of some of these claims. His task is to make the British people understand that justice, too.

But, regardless of the outcome of the immediate problems about the Mediterranean, one thing seems sure. There will be no war, so long as the Axis nations fear the probable attitude of America in such an eventuality.

Whether we wish it or not, the strength of this nation falls like a warning shadow across the diplomatic council tables of all the world.

Another Joe Louis fight has been lined up, for April. Another young man, whose name we forget, has a date with a dream.

Quite a persuasive case is to be made out for war now, instead of later when the chemists and inventors have thought of something worse.

For breaking a traffic rule in Germany, the cop deflates your tires. Our minions of the law start off differently. Here, it's your ego.

come. Whether one dons the uniform or spectator sports wear, it will come to much the same thing.

We take it from their respective memoirs that an advantage of being a Barrymore is that one sees through other Barrymores.

SAVE THE LIBRARIES!

One slim book—Thomas Paine's Common Sense—written in language that the common man could understand and sold at a price that took its message into every home, fused the molten metal of liberty and led directly to the founding of the United States of America.

The man who fired "the shot heard 'round the world" had read that book, and others in the same spirit, and from that day to this the ideals of liberty and intelligent progress have been kept alive by the wide dissemination of the printed word, both in inexpensive booklets and by various systems of making available to all persons books on all subjects. In this century, more particularly in the last six years, libraries have brought into their circle of influence more and more of the population of the country. Thousands upon thousands have been taught to read who never before had experienced the richness of knowledge bound in the literature of America.

Having helped in this, Georgia now prepares to retrogress by shifting the burden of economy to the one field which gives hope for increased incomes and increased intelligence in public affairs, that of the school libraries. More aptly, these should be termed community libraries, for they serve not only children but their parents and all who can read. In some communities, the state library fund, matched by the county, provided the first access to reading material ever afforded these people. The light that is education was brought them, and now Georgia proposes to snuff it out in the name of economy, at a time when members of the legislature offer an appropriations bill equal to, if not greater than, the highest in history.

A few examples of this crime committed in the name of economy and in the face of a ruling of the attorney general that this matching fund is integrally a part of the textbook fund, set aside specifically for the purchase of books:

In one county, the Parent-Teacher Association struggled for months, sponsoring ice cream festivals and other entertainments to earn $1,500 with which to secure a library. A truck was purchased and fitted out as a traveling library for the rural sections with still other hard-earned funds. The truck can now rot on its tires. There is no money to match that little, by comparison, fund of $1,500 when the legislature asks $40,000,000 from the people of Georgia to operate state "services."

In another county, in a one-room school house, the first library in its history was furnished. The teacher began to read "Heidi"—that poignant story of childhood—to her class. It was their first contact with the richness of literature, and class remained hours overtime so that the book could be heard to the end. Education is more than the learning by rote of grammar, arithmetic and phonetics. Here was the education that economy would strangle.

It hasn't been entirely a state and county job. Publishers have co-operated, and prices have been more than fair. In many cases, there have been outright sacrifices made to help these rural and small town libraries.

Economy in state affairs is both possible and necessary, but when it removes the source of democracy, knowledge, and hamstrings the handmaiden of progress, reading, it ceases to be economy and becomes criminal parsimony.

CONFEDERATE PENSIONS

In reorganizing the public welfare department of the state government and reapportioning its funds to cover its many activities, the Confederate veterans should not be overlooked. It has been felt for many years that the pensions paid these few survivors of the War Between the States were not commensurate with the esteem and affection in which they are held by the people.

The house of representatives has already passed a bill increasing these payments from $30 to $50 per month. The bill is now before the committee of the senate. It is expected to be reported favorably. When it reaches the senate floor it should promptly be enacted into law.

The proposed legislation carries no increase in pensions to any save the few actual survivors of the Confederate service. There were only 153 as of February 1.

Advanced age is taking a heavy toll from the ever thinning ranks. The opportunity to do all that can be done for these old warriors which must be taken advantage of now or never. Nobody will begrudge the few additional dollars necessary to fulfill an obligation contracted by the state three-quarters of a century ago when these, as mere boys, went forth to fight and suffer in defense of their ideals.

Editorial of the Day

BALANCE OF POWER

(From The Dallas Morning News.)
Careful weighing of the news from Europe bolsters the hope that the aggressor dictators will not precipitate any general war in the next few months—perhaps not in 1939. Chamberlain's plain pledge of war aid to France and Roosevelt's policy of giving industrial aid to Europe's democracies give Hitler and Mussolini cause to think twice before starting any real trouble.

The British pledge to France offsets Hitler's promise to Italy. Perhaps it does more than that, because it is stated more clearly and is more likely to be fulfilled if occasion should arise. It puts a strain on credulity to imagine Hitler rushing into a major war to gain Djibouti, or even Tunisia, for Italy. More likely he would be content with shouting dire threats, as Mussolini did in the Czech crisis.

The new turn in American foreign policy also tends to offset the former weight of Czechoslovakia and Russia on the side of France and England. Though we have made no pledge to give military or naval aid to these countries, and are not likely to do so, the availability of American airplanes and other military supplies for England and France is a factor that neither Hitler nor Mussolini can afford to ignore.

These factors and others—such as the presence in the Djibouti harbor of a French warship whose guns have a range of 15 miles—already seem to have a cooling effect on Mussolini's ardor for war. It does not seem likely that Hitler will be likely to pipe down on Tunisia. And Hitler may decide to let colonies wait until he has consolidated his gains in eastern Europe. With the United States as a new factor in the balance of power, an early outbreak of war appears much less likely.

THE CAPITAL PARADE FAIR ENOUGH

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

"RISK CAPITAL" PROBLEM WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—One of the really pressing economic problems of our times is the scarcity of "risk capital." "Risk capital" is the venturesome, rich man's money which will take big risks in new enterprises in the hope of big returns. In fact, it is the sort of money that starts the business wheels turning again.

A chief reason that risk capital is scarce is that rich men are taxed so heavily on big profits, these days, that they prefer small profits and no risks. And a chief reason why they are willing to take small profits and no risks is the existence, in this country alone in the world, of tax exempt bonds. Economists estimate that there are several billions of dollars invested in tax exempt bonds which would be forced into productive, stimulative investment by the removal of tax exemption. The wisdom of removing tax exemption is one of the few points of agreement for economic thinkers of all sorts, from the partners in J. P. Morgan & Co. to the wildest and woolliest New Deal theorists.

THE LOBBYISTS SWARM

In the face of this situation, it is not a pretty sight to see senators and representatives lending a willing ear to lobbyists seeking to preserve tax exemption. At this session, on the personal suggestion of the President, two bills have been introduced, one to take the tax exempt privilege from future issues of federal, state and municipal bonds, and the other to subject federal, state and municipal salaries to income taxes. If the supreme court had not placed an astonishing interpretation on the sixteenth amendment, neither bill would have been necessary. As it is, both are. They have been written as legislative enactments rather than constitutional amendments simply because the present justices show signs of being ready to reverse their predecessors' decision.

As a consequence, the lobbyists have swarmed to Capitol Hill. The petty, salary-grabbing officials, seeking to protect themselves from income taxes, have been numerous, but comparatively unimportant. It is said, in any case, that the income tax bill will pass.

But it is extremely important that men like New York city's Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and New York state's Comptroller Morris Tremain should journey to the hill to attack the bill to tax public bonds. Their argument is that, if the tax exemption is removed, states and cities will have to pay higher interest rates. Treasury experts who are handling the bill for the President reply that the matter of fact, both arguments are inconsequential. The question is one of the general welfare, and it's not pretty to see senators and representatives listening to Mayor LaGuardia and Comptroller Tremain, because congress has no business to be swayed by pressure groups in questions of that sort.

LOUDEST SCREAMING

It was the President's original intention to prevent both his proposals in one. Fortunately, Undersecretary of the Treasury John W. Hanes persuaded him to accept two bills. Had he not done so, the salary-grabbing officials and the worried state and municipal bond-sellers would certainly have joined their forces and triumphed. As it was, in spite of the overwhelming public sentiment behind it, Hanes had to make a tremendous effort to get even the income taxing bill out of the house ways and means committee. The committee members, being job-holders themselves, were sympathetic to their grievous colleagues. As Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, remarked in executive session:

"Hanes captivated my imagination, but I am going to vote for this measure reluctantly."

As for the really significant bond taxing bill, that has not even been taken up. The conference of mayors, one of the most powerful lobbies in Washington, is ready to swing into action the moment a word is said about the measure. A new conference on state defense, composed of high officials, 40 states, has been formed and established Washington headquarters with the specific purpose of beating it. And, whatever Hanes' efforts, the measure will probably be beaten in the end.

The same thing happens over and over. An obvious sensible move interferes with the interests of a pressure group. The pressure group screams with rage. Although the move is sensible, nobody screams back, and congress obeys the loudest screaming, as though by instinct.

Many a weary mile,
Upon his back a cruel load,
But in his eyes a smile.

He struggled through the bitter years
Found peace a little while,

Misunderstood, he met the scorn
Of those who saw him pass;
But angels sang of joy newborn

Interpreters

Of Dreams.
It has always seemed to me that these people who make a profession out of the interpretation of dreams have worked out a mighty sweet system for themselves. They have what appears to be a sure-fire routine that is bound to satisfy every client.

Go to one of them with a dream to be interpreted. Tell them all the fantastic plot that came to you in sleep and then listen to their learned dissertations.

For one thing, an interpreter will tell you and on. Anyone who is something in your life which you regard as a repressive, something standing in the way of full realization of your aspirations.

Well, isn't that true of absolutely everyone? Doesn't that apply to every living human on the earth? Is there anyone of us who has realized, to the full, every ambition? Do you, or any of you, lack the belief that something or other is standing in your way? Of course you don't.

That part of the dream interpretation is sure fire, anyway. Then they'll go to the next step. Tell you that, in your dream, the inhibitions of consciousness are removed and that you acknowledge the repressive factor. Saying the same thing over, another way. And so on, and on. Anyone who could, by collecting a few of these universal truths and putting them into impressive sounding language, set up as an interpreter of dreams, isn't very smart, anyway.

There Was

Joseph—
I have always thought Joseph was rather clever in his interpretation of Pharaoh's dream. But, at that, his entire career in Egypt indicates he didn't have so much competition. Every time he changed his position in the Egyptian social order, it wasn't long before he was running things. He must have been a good deal of a shrew. And the folks who nominally held the jobs and drew the pay, while Joseph did the heavy work, must have been the ancestors of those professional politicians of today who seek out a good job, with a hefty salary check attached, and then spend their time loafing around while some assistant, who really understands the job, does all the work. How many important stuffed shirts wouldn't be worth their salt if it wasn't for their secretaries?

But getting back to Joseph. He was bought, as a slave, by Potiphar. And shortly thereafter he was in full charge of Potiphar's affairs, running his household, his estate and what passed for a bank account in those days. But for that unfortunate affair with Mrs. Potiphar he would probably have owned the place in a year or two.

Next, he goes to prison. And what happens? Genesis, Chapter 39, Verse 22, tells us: "And the keeper of the prison committed to Joseph's hand all the prisoners that were in the prison, and what they did there, he was the doer of it."

Running the whole shebang, you see, while the keeper got the glory and the shekels of the job.

Pharaoh.
Then came the incident of the interpretation of the dream of Pharaoh. And what did Pharaoh do? Of course! He passed the hard part of his job to Joseph, but kept the glory for himself. Here's the verse explaining it: "Thou shalt be over my house, and according unto thy word shall all my people be ruled: only I will be in the throne only I be greater than thou."

Once again you see the touch of the politician, just as it is today. Pharaoh kept the throne, but the responsibilities of the kingdom he turned over to Joseph.

Again, I think Joseph was as good as a dream interpreter. But I don't think these modern exponents of the obvious, with their "repressives" and "handicaps" and "subconscious" would be much of a success running either a kingdom or a household. Or even a prison.

Revival

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Father Coughlin's fine patriotic fury against those who would furlough this country in a war with a foreign nation to avenge wrongs in the old world is a revival of the sentiment of many native Americans in the middle part of the last century. The principal objects of their wrath were immigrants who, in paraphrase of today's label, could have been called the international Irishmen.

Irish refugees from poverty, hunger and political and religious persecution fled to this country and colonized in the urban centers. They did not take readily to farming, but had a lively political instinct and native patriots charged that they voted in powerful, clannish blocs in the cities. They were regarded as an alien influence in American political life, and the Catholic church was similarly suspected because in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, where the refugees were landing in vast numbers, its membership was mainly composed of foreigners.

The Irish refugees of those days, men and women of the same faith and stock from which Father Coughlin himself has sprung, were hated like the Jewish refugees of the present. Election frauds and political grafts were bitterly resented by the native Americans as politicians exploited the green-horns to thwart native proposals and defeat their tickets at the polls.

Prejudice

The immigrants were under, disorderly and troublesome, speaking in general terms. So, even as late as the turn of the century, a music hall song, possibly one of Harrigan and Hart's, sounded the refrain, "And they were Irish, and they were Irish, and yet they say, 'No Irish need apply.'"

This referred to the virtues of Irish heroes and to the open prejudice against the Irish expressed in the employment ads in American cities.

The bill against the Irish and, of course, the Catholics—for they were almost all Catholics—also accused them of carrying into their new life here their active hatred of a foreign nation with which this country was on friendly terms. It was argued that immigrants who took citizenship here had no right to imperil the life of their new country by activities which might involve the United States in a war with Great Britain.

Many Irishmen who became American citizens remained Irish at heart and plotted war and other mischief against Great Britain here. In 1867, in Philadelphia, 6,000 Irish-American Fenian soldiers, armed and uniformed, marched in a parade, an incident which, were it duplicated today by 6,000 American Jews as a threat to Germany, would be sure to arouse great indignation in Father Coughlin. This parade occurred about 18 months after John O'Neill had actually led an armed Irishman invasion of Canada in which Fort Erie was captured.

Accounts Differ

Accounts of this act of war by immigrant, Irish-American, Fenians, differ. The Encyclopedia Britannica, not unreasonably, says that after the surprise capture of Fort Erie many of O'Neill's men deserted, that a battalion of Canadian volunteers routed the remainder at Ridgeway and that survivors retreated to the United States ship Michigan after President Johnson disowned the war on behalf of the United States. But in "Speeches From the Dock," a patriotic Irish book, one reads that after Fort Erie the invaders were licked and an regiment of the Queen's own Canadian volunteers from Toronto at Ridgeway and probably "would have swept Canada and made that country their base of operations against British power in Ireland" but for the interference of the United States government.

In 1870 the same O'Neill again led a force of international Irishmen against a friendly neighbor in a foray from Franklin, Vt. The encyclopedia says the Irish were dispersed by a single volley and that O'Neill was arrested by order of President Grant. There is, unfortunately, no mention of this second act of war by Irish-American internationalists in "Speeches From the Dock," so it must not be accepted that Fenians were so easily routed. More likely the truth is that they wreaked terrible slaughter against enormous odds and chased Her Majesty's blood-brothers until their feet wore through their brogues to the ground.

The American natives didn't like this any more than Father Coughlin now likes the Jewish propaganda against the Nazis. But Americans of Irish descent to this day can make out a case for the immigrant plotters and fighters against the bloody oppressors in Ireland and for the sale of various issues of Kathleen Mavourneen bonds for various Irish republicans among American citizens. Yet if the international Irish had been handled as Father Coughlin's political comrades today propose to handle Jews who are similarly international, this country might have been denied the spiritual and intellectual benefit of its course. That is something to think about one way or another.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

WILL SMITH, SOCIOLOGIST ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 23.—Will Smith came in with the tray of food and other essentials. He put it down, very carefully, and stepped back.

"Will," said Andrew Erwin, "that gentleman over there is Senator Bennet Clark, of the United States senate."

"Sho is glad to see you, suh," said Will Smith, who is quite old and possessed of much dignity.

"Will," said Andrew Erwin, "when I told you this morning that Senator Clark was coming, what was it you said about his name?"

"Well, suh," said Will Smith, moving his feet in modest confusion, "I said, suh, that it was a mighty business soundin' name."

"Will," said the senator, "I am glad to meet you."

"Thank you, suh," said Will Smith, standing very straight in his white coat.

"Will," asked a publisher of a newspaper who was present, "you are about old enough to be eligible for an old-age pension, aren't you?"

Will looked inquiringly at Andrew Erwin.

"Go ahead and tell them if you want too," said Andrew Erwin.

"Well, suh," said Will Smith, "I done tried that once."

"Tried what, Will?"

"Relief, suh."

"Well, you had a job, didn't you, Will?"

"Yes, suh, but a lot of old folks was getting it and they had jobs. So I didn't say nothin' to nobody. I went down there and told 'em I'd like to get on."

"What did they tell you, Will?"

"Well, suh, he tole me to come back on Thursday. Dat is, any Thursday 'cept the next Thursday."

"Did you go back, Will?"

"Yes, suh, I skipped a Thursday and den I went back. When I got to him he was so rough he scared me. He done had so many old folks his patience done wore out. So, I didn't go back."

He stood there, waiting.

THE SENATOR LISTENS

"Will," said the publisher, "what's your idea about relief, anyhow?"

"Well, suh," said Will, wrinkling his forehead and thinking, "it looks dis way to me. Heap 'o folks needs it. A heap 'o 'em getting it what don't. It looks like dis to me. I'd take all dem folks what needs it and I'd put them on dis heah land what ain't been used. I'd give 'em some tools to use but they'd git 'em from the shed every day and not keep 'em. And den I'd see dat they worked. This heah business of giving 'em a little for nothin' ain't really doin' nobody no good. No, suh."

"I've heard worse plans proposed from the senate floor," said the United States senator.

Will was thinking hard and if he heard the senator he gave no sign.

"There is one thing I think is wrong," he said. And waited.

"What is it, Will?"

"Well, suh, they tells me folks what owns a little spot of land can't git no help even if dey is old. Now, suh, if a man and a woman had worked demselves out and is old and can't work no more, it seems to me, suh, that dey ought to be helped to keep what dey done worked all dere lives to git."

"I certainly have heard much worse ideas advanced than that," said the senator whom many think has an excellent chance to be the Democratic nominee for president.

So, maybe some day there will be a Will Smith amendment to the social security laws. A lot of people smarter than Will have thought and thought and thought about it and come forward with less sensible statements than the one which says this business of giving 'em a little for nothin' 'aint really doin' nobody no good."

Will has nine children. He can't read or write. He has educated all his children and they all have jobs. His house is painted and he has a radio and a piano, all paid for. He has a telephone, too. You might ask in what country in the world that story could be told and the answer would be America. In no other country could an illiterate and untrained man rear and educate a family of nine, become the owner of his own home and furnish it with modern appliances.

THE PRESS INSTITUTE

Meanwhile, the Press Institute, which opened with an address by Senator Clark, moves on apace with excellent programs and much fine fellowship.

The editors, from small towns and large, are here. Their numbers are augmented by the students from the School of Journalism and also by other students from the university. A fine lot of boys and girls are studying journalism and the profession will be the better because of their training.

The weekly paper editors are the real force of the institute. No state in the nation has weekly papers any finer than those of Georgia. They know the real America; they really know the people. Their editorial staffs will have the personal touch and the personal contacts. They are fine citizens. Many of them have been honored by their communities. The latest was Miss Virginia Polhill Price, who was given a silver trophy by

Cut in Welfare Operating Costs Urged

House Economy Probers Propose Adding 4,000 Pensioners by Reduction of Salaries, Jobholders.

Addition of more than 4,000 new pensioners to the state welfare rolls "without an additional dime in new taxes" was proposed yesterday by the house economy investigating committee.

The group, which for nearly two weeks has probed operating costs of the Welfare Department, sent a recommendation to the house that appropriation for welfare administration be cut by $170,150 and the saving credited to the fund for public assistance benefits.

Present old-age pensions average $8.60 per month in Georgia. By augmenting the extra state funds with federal and county money, the committee estimated it would be possible to pay benefits to 4,000 new pensioners, or the equivalent number of dependent children or needy blind.

Deen Lauded.

The recommendation praised Braswell Deen, recently appointed director of public welfare, for his co-operation, but said it had found evidence of a long-time "misunderstanding" between the State Welfare Board and Lamar Murdaugh, Deen's predecessor, over the question of authority.

"This committee is of the opinion that the welfare board has full authority as to salary schedules, personnel and qualifications," the report said.

In testimony before the committee, members of the welfare board asserted Murdaugh had failed to co-operate, and cited differences of opinion over salaries and personnel.

The report suggested amendment of the state stabilization fund act to prevent future use of this money for permanent improvements, such as the new office building now being erected opposite the capitol. The welfare department provided $94,500 in state stabilization income for this purpose, under two executive orders signed by the Governor.

Administrative Costs.

The committee also was critical of administrative costs in the department of public welfare, which it estimated at 26 per cent of the total appropriation for public assistance. Attention of the house was drawn to the federal government's limitation of six per cent of available funds for this purpose. Proposals of the welfare board for consolidation of three divisions, reductions in executive salaries and discharge of 24 employees were commended by the committee.

The report, however, also advocated elimination of four statistical consultants at an estimated saving of $12,000, and other minor retrenchments which would bring the actual slash in overhead to $122,900 as compared with the last fiscal year.

To this the committee added another cut of $47,250, or half the apparent surplus which the welfare department was able to use toward construction of the new office building.

"Since the department had this available for purposes other than administration," said Representative James V. Carmichael, of Cobb, "we feel it should be cut from the appropriation and allotted to public assistance benefits."

Voluntary cuts in overhead by the welfare board, slated to go into effect March 1, totaled approximately $96,000.

ROBERTS POST UP TO CHIEF—MAYOR

Confident Committee Will Follow Recommendations.

Recommendations as to a successor to the late Captain S. J. Roberts, of the police department, will be left entirely to Chief Hornsby, Mayor Hartsfield declared yesterday.

The mayor said a number of suggestions had been offered as to a successor, but he reiterated his policy to let the chief of police run the department. He said he was confident the police committee would follow the chief's recommendations.

AGNES SCOTT DRIVE FOR $40,000 BEGINS

'Boat Race' To Mark Progress of Campaign for New Buildings.

Agnes Scott College yesterday launched its semi-centennial campaign to raise $40,000 for the construction of additional buildings on the campus.

As an innovation, the progress of the campaign will be marked by a "boat race" between members of the student body and the faculty, a miniature glass lake having been constructed in the lobby of the administration building. As pledges are secured the respective "crews" will be advanced along courses marked on the "lake," indicating the progress being made by the respective canvassers. The campaign is being directed by Dr. Philip Davidson, professor of history at the institution.

The money will be used to erect a new dormitory, to be known as Hopkins Hall in honor of Miss Nanette Hopkins, until her death recently dean of the college, and a new Fine Arts building which will contain a chapel and studios for art, music and speech. The dormitory building will include modern suites with adjoining baths, and will be used by girls from all classes. A dining hall also will be included in the building.

The first campaign at Agnes Scott was launched in 1909 and from funds realized the science hall, old library and the freshman dormitory were constructed in 1911. Subsequent drives resulted in funds for the construction of the administration building, the new library and gymnasium.

As part of the semi-centennial observance, a special program will be presented in conjunction with the commencement exercises at the college, it was announced. Speakers will include Dr. E. C. Colewell, professor of New Testament at Chicago University, and Dr. Mary E. Wooley, former president of Mount Holyoke College and an outstanding educator.

'IDIOT'S DELIGHT' WELL RECEIVED

Play Reveals Deeper Meaning Than Shown in Hollywood Version.

By LEE ROGERS.

Those Atlantans who were unfortunate in seeing the Hollywood slaughter of Robert E. Sherwood's powerful anti-Fascist, anti-war "Idiot's Delight" before even so much as reading the original play witnessed an eye-opener last night as Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt read meaning into lines the average moviegoer had found confusing.

It was a sell-out house that greeted the special Atlanta appearance of America's current No. 1 stage couple and the reception accorded the Lunts (the couple was married in 1922) proved conclusively that, given good acting, big names and a good play, Atlantans will support the legitimate stage.

This same company will present "Amphitruon 38" today in matinee and night performances at the Erlanger theater.

Lunt was most convincing in the role of the cheap vaudeville actor playing three roles—the phoney Russian countess, the English cockney girl and the American vaudeville troupier. While she was at the time portraying the Russian mistress and tool of the great munitions king (John Barry), she was constantly called upon to mix accents in a manner to convey her confusion naturally to the audience. Miss Fontanne as an actress is superb, but to recall the film play again—Norma Shearer's interpretation of Irene was done with better Russian accent. Both actresses appeared to

Atlanta Makes Movie Debut Today With Filming of Personality Points

Convention and Visitors' Bureau Sponsors Picture Designed to Attract Nation's Tourists—World's Premiere Will Be Shown Here Tonight.

By ST. JOHN BARNWELL.

Atlanta becomes a movie star today!

The first official movie starring Atlanta will be made this afternoon by the Atlanta Convention and Visitors' Bureau, of which Faber A. Bollinger is head. Not only will it be developed rapidly so as to be shown this evening at a local theater, but later will be seen throughout the nation, according to W. H. Kimberly, executive photographer in charge. So "Atlanta's Premiere" is to be held in Atlanta.

"The object of the super-city production," explained Bollinger, "is to acquaint Atlanta with their city and show Atlanta to be so attractive that more outsiders will come."

Varied Cast.

The cast will be composed of those people whom visitors question: "What should I see and where?" And who are those? Just exactly whom you would ask if you were a stranger! These question men who must know all the answers are none other than elevator captains, taxi drivers, policemen and all who must meet the public and give information with a smile. Three hundred have been chosen for this production.

If Atlanta were a feminine star she would be a typical southern girl—beautiful but not dumb. Her beauty will be photographed in terms of handsome residential sections; her intelligence, in scenes on school and college campuses; her culture, in the High Museum of Art and women's clubs; her governmental activity, in the capitol, city hall, and her modernness in the thriving city traffic of downtown Atlanta.

The lineage of this southern beauty will be emphasized by views of the Cyclorama and other historic points. Atlanta's trend toward the musical will be translated by the All Girls State Band, her literary ability will be depicted by the Wren's Nest, former residence of Joel Chandler Harris, and Margaret Mitchell's home.

Since Atlanta is too interesting to be pictured in one afternoon, the plan is to have other movies made of future tours. But this cast will meet today at 12 o'clock in the city auditorium. After lunch in Taft hall, the troupe will drive over the Washington street viaduct to the Union Station.

From the station they will go to the capitol, city hall, and city hall. The plan is then to take in Girls' High school, Oglethorpe University, Atlanta University, federal colored housing project and Spelman College. After visiting the Wren's Nest and the Fair Street school, they will go to Grant park to see the Cyclorama where the All Girls' Band will greet them. Officials of the city are planning to be present to lay emphasis on the historical picture of the War Between the States.

Seeing the federal penitentiary and Burns' cottage, the actors will view the golf links of East Lake where Atlanta's golf kings have trained. Driving through Druid Hills, Morningside, Ansley Park and the Peachtree circle section, the home of Margaret Mitchell will be pointed out.

To Visit Museum.

The High Museum of Art will be visited, Woman's Club shown and the inspection of Georgia Tech with the Tech housing project will draw the movie to a close. Throughout the trip a loud speaker will provide the "actors" with information concerning the places visited. By 5:30 o'clock the troupe is expected to enter the Roxy theater to see the movie in which they have played. Still pictures will be made on the tour by members of the Atlanta Camera Club, pictures which will be used officially in various publications that tell the story of Atlanta.

The transportation committee is composed of A. L. Hendley, W. P. Pollard and W. P. Arrington. The traffic committee consists of Police Chief Hornsby, Captain Jack Malcolm and Lieutenant "Buck" Weaver. Mayor Baranco represents the entertainment committee.

BRITAIN ASSURES FRANCE OF BACKING

Moves To Bolster Harassed Paris Government.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—(UP)—Britain acted tonight to forestall the rumored "March crisis" in Europe. Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax declared in the house of lords debate on foreign affairs that there were no reservations tied to Britain's solidarity with France.

The statement also was intended to bolster the prestige of the French government, now facing leftist criticism for capitulating unconditionally in recognizing Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

There have been persistent reports that Premier Benito Mussolini intends to present Italy's demands upon France when the Spanish war is over.

BIG BETHEL SELECTS CONFERENCE DELEGATE

OLD-AGE PENSIONS PROFITABLE TO COUNTIES

Editorial Constitution: I wish to commend the legislature's economy committee for their efforts to reduce overlapping and duplicated government expenses, and to save money for the taxpayers of Georgia.

The committee has been given every co-operation by the administration. Some of the suggestions of the committee have already been carried out by executive order, and legislation concerning other suggestions is now being considered by the assembly.

Our Governor told the committee he would co-operate with them, and he is doing so, but, as he said in an address to the assembly, co-operation is not a one-way street. If we expect co-operation, we must give co-operation.

I am naturally most concerned with the humanitarian part of our program, and with the efforts to provide sufficient funds for the work by people and other needy groups in our state. The people have voted for such aid, it was made a part of our state Democratic platform, and every Democratic elected on that platform is honor bound to support it.

Providing funds for public welfare work is not like taxing for other purposes, but really brings more money into the state, increases trade, and generally helps raise the financial level of our people. Each dollar paid for the work by our taxpayers is matched by a dollar in federal funds. The $2 thus provided are soon put into circulation by the beneficiary, who thus helps increase trade with merchants and other businesses.

I wish all the representatives would ask the welfare directors of their respective counties to furnish them with an estimate of benefits coming to their counties this work, and the amount the county is paying for such benefits.

In my own county, Lowndes, we are receiving for old-age assistance alone $53,214 a year, at a cost of only $5,053 to the county. The total amount received by my county, distributed by this department, is $113,832 a year, at a total cost to the county of only $8,892 a year. This amount does not take into consideration the money saved the county in caring for paupers and maintaining a home for these people. If this were estimated, it would make the profit to the county even greater, and you will find the same profit all over the state.

What is done in this assembly will decide whether Georgia shall go forward or backward in caring for its needy people. This is no time for selfish motives, but for the sake of our state we must have full co-operation between the administration, the economy committee, and the other members of the legislature.

W. W. WEBB, President Old-Age Pension Club, Atlanta.

EMORY ORCHESTRA TO PRESENT CONCERT

Emory University Glee Club and orchestra will be presented at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the city auditorium in the series of Sunday Civic Concerts, sponsored by the city and the recreation division of the WPA.

The glee club recently has completed a successful tour of Chattanooga, Anniston, Montgomery, New Orleans, Pensacola, Tallahassee, Albany and La Grange. Both the orchestra and glee club are directed by Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey. Tom Brumby will be heard in several piano solos during Sunday's program.

M'CLELLAND, ALMAND TAKE OATH OF OFFICE

John S. McClelland, judge of the newly-created additional division of the Fulton criminal court, and Bond Almand, named to McClelland's former post of solicitor of the court, took oaths yesterday morning by Governor Rivers.

The general assembly last week passed legislation setting up the extra court division, recommended by Judge Jesse Wood of the division, to clear up the criminal court docket.

"These are Clan Alpine's warriors true, And, Saxon, I am Rhoderick Dhu!"

As the need for a united southern front at the next Democratic national convention grows more obvious and the many who have been suggesting it in recent years seek a meeting of minds, it is plain that choice must be made between two totally different ways of reaching unity. One way is the sending of untrained delegations free to join forces and throw their total support to the candidate most likely to understand and serve the south's vital interests. The other way is to send delegations instructed for some southern leader who will not entertain the hope of nomination but will bargain with one voice for the south and release his delegates at the proper time and to the proper person.

The imperative thing is that there be genuine unity and that the basis of unity be the south. There can be no such unity if either New Dealers or anti-New Dealers control or if the quarrel between them is reflected in the delegations. Undoubtedly there are anti-New Dealers who are talking a united southern front now with a view to nothing more than opposition to the present administration. And vice versa. But the need for southern unity is based on things antedating or independent of the New Deal. It can be served only if the New Deal is not an issue. The southern front is something that must be of, for and by the south—and the south alone.

Can genuine unity be had through untrained delegations? Some of our leaders who are most

BOOK PROBE ENDS IN PRAISE OF BOARD

State Education Body Lauded; Savings in Text Purchases Found.

A house committee which investigated distribution of free text books in Georgia schools yesterday praised the State Board of Education in its report.

The report, signed by Representative F. F. Hatchett, of Meriwether county, chairman, declared the text books are bought on competitive bids at a saving to the state. Although some unwanted texts are sent to some schools, the committee advised that other schools are using these types of books and that they will be redistributed.

Meanwhile, Governor Rivers issued new commissions to four members of the State School Board. Walter H. Rich, of Atlanta, was commissioned until July 1, 1941; W. M. McKay, of Stephens county, until July 1, 1945; W. C. Cleary Jr., of Columbus, until July 1, 1946; and Mrs. A. B. Conger, of Bainbridge, until July 1, 1945.

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

CHURCH GAMBLERS.

Some weeks ago I called attention to Dr. Gallup's poll on gambling in which he reported that the churches led the list of institutions fostering lotteries and raffles. It was somewhat reassuring to have him say in the correspondence which followed that his interviewers found a minimum amount of gambling in the churches in the deep south. Even so, we are not without definite instances of such practice, as is evidenced in a clipping from one of our Georgia weekly newspapers, just received. Omitting the name and location of the church, I quote the following from page notice:

"I am sponsoring a chicken supper Friday night, February 1, 6:30 o'clock. Chicken stew, 10 cents. Chicken salad, 15 cents. Coffee, 5 cents. Bingo will be played after supper with cakes for the prize."

Immediately someone will say, "Oh, what does it all amount to, anyway. If these folks want to have a chicken supper or oyster supper and then put on a bingo or some other game, let them. It's their business, isn't it? That's the way they want to raise money in their church, isn't that their business, after all?"

Certainly. But who will deny that it is gambling? Who will deny that it is encouraging the idea that you can get something for nothing—even for a church? Who will deny that gambling is today one of the prevalent evils of our land? Who will defend such a plan of raising money for the church as having any foundation of teaching in the Bible?

Moreover, what can the people in the above cited church say to the young people of that community who engage in other forms of gambling—horse races, dog races, etc., etc.? How will they feel when they pass along the road where convicts are wearing stripes for having been apprehended in a "skin" game?

Finally, will money thus raised by a church likely prove very useful? I have heard hardened gamblers say that they were never able to keep any of the money they won. Talking with a gambler in jail the other day, he said to me, "Here I am broke. I have gambled all my life. I have won thousands of dollars that I didn't work for and that never belonged to me. I have wound up where all gamblers wind up—penitentiary and without friends."

Churches of the Lord Jesus Christ will do well to follow His teachings in all things, remembering that it is more blessed to give than to receive—that love is the motive for all of our giving, and all our work and that everything must be done as unto the Lord.

tion plan is best, but it is important to remember that there is nothing either democratic or certain about uninstructed delegations, especially when it is a whole region, rather than one state, that is proposed to be served. We are reminded of that silly story about the gentleman who ordered a malted milk at a soda fountain. "What flavoring?" asked the soda-jerker. "Without flavoring, and by whom?"

When we hear of uninstructed delegations we always wonder "without what flavoring?" We wonder "Uninstructed for whom?"

AUTOPIRE KILLING CHARGED TO RAGE OVER NIGHT NOISE

Dairymen Slew Benning Officer With Hatchet and Poured Oil on Car, Negro Tells Solicitor.

OPELIKA, Ala., Feb. 23.—(P)—Solicitor Charles S. Moon announced today W. Herbert Bush, 37-year-old dairyman, was accused by a negro helper of killing Lieutenant William D. Davis in exasperation over being awakened by racing of an automobile motor.

Mystery had surrounded the death of Lieutenant Davis, an infantry officer of near-by Fort Benning, Ga., since his body was found in his burned car Sunday, February 12.

Moon quoted the dairy helper, Daniel Lee Major, as saying Bush hatched Davis, who was alone, and fired his car with oil after the lieutenant headed into the dairyman's cornfield to turn around about 4 o'clock in the morning and got stuck in the gully.

The road was popular with many city motorists for night driving.

Bush Is Quoted.
The negro's statement to officers said Bush strode to the car, told Davis "I am tired of you fellows coming out here and keeping me awake at night," pulled him partly from the car, and hit him with a hatchet as he stumbled on the running board.

Charged with first-degree murder, both Bush and Major were held in jail here. Moon said the dairyman maintained innocence. The prosecutor reported the negro said Bush got him up, told him to "come along," and took a hatchet with him as he walked to the car.

A can of used motor oil from the dairymen's house, he said, was used to saturate the ditched machine before it was set on fire. Badly burned, the body of Lieutenant Davis was identified through dental work and a ring. A 1931 graduate of the United States Military Academy, he was a son of the late Colonel William D. Davis, who was killed in France in 1918.

He left his wife at Fort Benning about 10 o'clock the night of February 11, telling her he expected to be out only a short time.

The negro, described as illiterate, has quarters in the garage of the Bush place, and was awake, he said, when the Davis car drove into the corn field, turned around and then came to a stop in the Rules as President Of Kiwanis for Day

Like Cinderella of storybook fame, Faber A. Bollinger, executive vice president of the Convention and Visitors' Bureau, ruled yesterday as president of the Albany Kiwanis Club.

gully, where the motor was raged with the lights still burning.

Asked what time it was, the solicitor said Major told him it was between 2:30 and 4 o'clock. Questioned why he was up at that time of night, Major was quoted as saying he had been to Columbus and had just gotten back and had not gone to sleep.

Solicitor Moon said Bush, in denying the slaying, told him he saw the car burning when he was awakened about 4 o'clock in the morning. He said he got into his car and rode down to the scene and about a half mile past it, but did not see anyone in the flaming car.

INTEREST ON LOANS CUT FOR FARMERS

Growers May Get Crop Production, Feeding Credit at 4 1-2 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(P)—Farmers belonging to local production credit associations will be able to get short-term crop production and livestock feeding loans at 4 1-2 per cent interest this year compared with 5 per cent last year, the Farm Credit Administration announced today.

Five years ago, 8 per cent interest was charged for such loans. There are 535 local production credit organizations serving virtually every agricultural county in the country. They have the privilege of discounting their loans with the federal intermediate credit banks.

The credit banks reduced their loan and discount rate from 2 to 1 1-2 per cent today, thereby making lower rates possible for farmer borrowers.

The FCA said that the rate reduction should save farmers at least $800,000 in interest charges this year. In 1938 farmers borrowed $302,622,000 through local credit associations.

In addition to McGill, others to be initiated are Jere N. Moore, editor of the Milledgeville Union Recorder and president of the Georgia Press Association; Ed Danforth, sports editor of the Atlanta Georgian; Dan McGill and Bryan Lumpkin, associate editors of the Athens Banner-Herald.

English Influence Is Riding High On Screens of Atlanta This Week

Kipling's 'Gunga Din' Inspired Fox Film, Shaw Wrote 'Pygmalion,' at Grand, and Laughton Plays in 'The Beachcomber' at Paramount; Gaal Stars at Rialto.

By LEE ROGERS,
Motion Picture Editor.

Kipling's "Gunga Din" comes to life on the screen today to vie for movie honors with George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion." And a character actor as is, appearing in his own production of "The Beachcomber."

Kipling wouldn't recognize his "Din," at the Fox, but Sam Jaffe in the title role does nobly by the pen character while Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Cary Grant and Victor McLaglen cavort as British officers not mentioned in the poem. Joan Fontaine is the only girl of consequence in the cast.

"The Beachcomber" is at the Paramount, with Laughton playing the role of the "Ginger Ted" and Elsa Lanchester the role of the missionary who seeks to reform him.

"The Girl Downstairs" finds Francisca Gaal starring with Franchot Tone in a MGM picture at the Rialto.

Gail Patrick is featured at the Capitol, opening Sunday, and the Roxettes will do classical as well as hotcha dances on the Roxy stage beginning tomorrow.

The Grand opened last night with "Pygmalion," in which Leslie Howard is the featured actor.

FOX PRESENTS 'GUNGA DIN'

Colorful and mysterious India has been a favorite setting for screen offerings since the early days of pictures. The country's most recent film appearance is in "Gunga Din," which starts today at the Fox theater.

The period of the picture is some 50 years ago, when England was starting to bring law and order to the wild border tribesmen of the country. As the moving force of a new outbreak, the natives revive the outlawed and supposedly extinct cult of Thug.

Man and wife in real life, Laughton and Elsa Lanchester have more scenes together in "The Beachcomber" than they did in "Henry the VIII" and "Rembrandt."

Cast as the most promising young woman attorney of the middle west, Miss Patrick finds the big city legal profession a far different thing than she expects when a suave but crooked lawyer makes use of her beauty, brains and trustfulness to cover up his own racketeering activities. Others featured in the film are Robert Preston and Otto Kruger.

Headline vaudeville acts to be presented on the stage starting Sunday include the Perry Twins.

'DISBARRED' TO PLAY ON CAPITOL SCREEN

Gail Patrick, "the screen's most perfect brunette beauty," plays a brilliant young woman lawyer who innocently becomes the front for a disbarred "mouthpiece" in her new picture, "Disbarred," a drama of the underworld, which opens at the Capitol theater Sunday.

It is not a musical play, but there is one song in it, especially written by Bob Wright and Chet Forrest. It is called "When You're in Love" and is sung by Miss Gaal. Norman Taurog, one of the half-dozen top-ranking directors in Hollywood, directed this picture, while the plot came from an original story by Sandor Hunyady.

ROXYETTE STARRED IN DANCE ROUTINE

For once one of Gae Foster's gay Roxyettes will be featured out of line with her fellows when Miss Dorothy Proby leads these dancing damsels through their colorful version of the classical "Morning, Noon and Night Overture." The selection of this number was inspired by the success attending their "Poet and Peasant" routine a week or so ago. But the girls aren't going entirely legitimate and promise a torrid number in their "Christopher Columbus Swing."

The vaudeville bill includes Mark Ballero, protean artist, whose talent for mimicry makes him change rapidly from one screen star into another; Marian Belett and English Brothers in imported comedy dance routines; Don Hooten, who whirls illuminated ropes, tap dances and throws bats about and Bob Easton, who, with his 22-year-old starlet, Ondee Odette, and Doris Keyes, make merry in a thoroughly amusing fashion.

On the screen will be a drama of the race track with Gordon Jones, Marsha Hunt and the Dr. Head of "Gone With the Wind," Henry Davenport, starring, M. Segal's Roxy orchestra and a newsreel will round out the show.

"HONOLULU" GOES TO RHODES SCREEN
Eleanor Powell, acknowledged to be the world's most accomplished woman tap dancer, proves her title again in "Honolulu," which is playing a second week in Atlanta, this time at the Rhodes theater.

A large and talented supporting cast includes Rita Johnson, Clarence Kolb, Jo Ann Sayers, Ann Morris, Willie Fung, Cliff Clark, Edward Gargan, Eddie Anderson, Sig Ruman and Ruth Hussey.

Robert Young has the male lead in a dual role, carrying the pleasantly light weight of a humorous, but plausible story. Comedy is provided by George Burns and Gracie Allen, of screen and radio fame.

CAMP ORGANIZATION WORLD WAR NURSE, CHAIRMEN NAMED MISS BARTLEY, DIES

Names Withheld Pending Acceptances; Essay Contest Is Announced.
County chairmen of the Democratic Council of Georgia were selected yesterday at a meeting of the executive committee and district vice chairmen of the group, but their names will not be made public until their acceptances have been received, Lawrence Camp, chairman of the council said yesterday.
The county officials were chosen at the first meeting of the directing spirits of the group, who organized three weeks ago, and dedicated themselves to the furtherance of New Deal objectives in Georgia.
Though largely an organization meeting, those present heard short addresses by J. Scott Davis, member of the general assembly, and Professor Glenn Rainey, of Georgia Tech.
Announced at the meeting was an essay contest for the high school children of the state on "What the National Administration Has Done for Georgia." Ten dollars will be awarded the writer of the best essay in each congressional district, and a $100 award will be made to the author of the best essay in the state. May 10 has been set as the contest deadline.
Board of judges for the contest are: Mrs. Max Land, Atlanta, chairman; Judge Blanton Fortson, Atlanta; Mrs. Clyde Hunt, Thomas; J. Scott Davis, Rome; and W. L. Hailey, Hartwell.

CAMP ORGANIZATION WORLD WAR NURSE, CHAIRMEN NAMED MISS BARTLEY, DIES

Succumbs to 20-Year Illness, Contracted After Overseas Service.
Miss Margaret Bartley, veteran Atlanta trained nurse who served abroad with the Emory hospital unit during the World War, died last night at St. Joseph's hospital after an illness of nearly 20 years. Death resulted from heart disease.
A graduate of the St. Joseph's training school in 1907, Miss Bartley was for several years connected with the Sacred Heart church and later entered the Red Cross nursing service.
In 1918 she went to France with the Emory unit and was stationed at D'Lois for the duration of the war. She returned to this country in 1919 and, contracting a heart ailment, spent several months in a New York city hospital. She returned here in 1922 and has been a patient at St. Joseph's since.
High tribute was paid to her war record last night by three Atlanta physicians who also were connected with the Emory unit.
Dr. Frank K. Boland, chairman of the Atlanta Red Cross chapter and chief surgeon of the unit, said she was one of the most active nurses in the service and that she always "carried on a real fight for the comfort and welfare of all American nurses."
"Miss Bartley was a forceful character," declared Dr. C. W. Strickler Sr., chief physician of the unit. "She always looked out for her patients in the face of all kinds of difficulties."
Dr. E. H. Greene, president of the Fulton County Medical Society and formerly a surgeon with the unit, described Miss Bartley as "a natural leader."
Funeral arrangements are to be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

Cold Wave Increases Throughout East

Upper New York Digs Out of Snow; Traffic in New England Crawls on Ice-Glazed Highways

By The Associated Press.
Upstate New York dug out of snow and virtually all New England traffic was hampered by ice-glazed highways yesterday as a cold wave increased its sting throughout the east.
Sub-freezing weather, leaving slightly higher temperatures between the Rocky mountains and the Mississippi river, also drove the mercury lower in the south. Clear skies and diminishing winds added a little relief.
Ice jams in the Genesee river in western New York forced waters into lowlands. Overflowing creeks disrupted traffic on several highways near Rochester and snowdrifts as a result of Wednesday's fall closed other roads in the north country.
Marooned Six Hours.
A freight train, stuck in 15-foot snowdrifts at Rosiere, N. Y., was hauled out. A bus driver was rescued from his bus after being marooned six hours in huge drifts near Watertown, N. Y.
New Englanders were warned a snowstorm near the Great Lakes might swing toward their section, which expected slowly rising temperatures. Although winds were normal, a 105-mile-an-hour blow whipped the 6,300-foot summit of Mount Washington in New Hampshire and subsided to 67 miles.
Two deaths were attributed to the east's freeze. Mrs. Mariana Gaudier, 79, was found frozen to death outside her home in Upton, Mass. A man, found dead in Warren, Mass., was apparently fatally injured by falling on an icy sidewalk.
Nation's Coldest.
Owl's Head, N. Y., became one of the nation's coldest spots when the mercury sank to 21 degrees below zero. It was 6 below at Malone, N. Y. Snow was piled up from 4 to 15 inches in upstate New York.
The country was generally fair except in Minnesota and the Dakotas, where light snow flurries fell.
Temperatures dropped to near zero at Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati, East Port, Maine, Burlington, Vt. and Concord N. H.

Presbyterian Leaders Talk Over Unification

George M. Damour Funeral Today

Last Rites at Spring Hill for Prominent Atlanta Businessman.
Funeral services for George M. Damour, 48, president of the Adair Realty and Loan Company, who died Wednesday night at a private hospital, will be conducted at 11:30 o'clock this morning at Spring Hill.
Dr. Lester Rumble and Dr. Ryland Knight will officiate and burial will be in West View under direction of H. M. Patterson & Son.
Pallbearers will be Bolding H. Jones Jr., Dr. Lewis Hoppe, James S. Budd, E. Clem Powers, Julian M. Harrison, Jack Adair, Kingman Moore, Louis Jones, Robert J. Taylor Jr., F. Marion Swanson, Tate L. Earnest, Russell W. Michael, Frank Martin, Ed W. Cuthorn and Harold N. Cooledge. An honorary escort will be formed of business associates.
One of the best known businessmen in the city, Mr. Damour was a native of Macon, moving here in 1918 as a representative of the Freeman's Insurance Company. He later organized and managed the insurance department of the Adair company and was named president about 10 years ago.
Stricken unexpectedly with an attack of appendicitis last Friday, he underwent an emergency operation that night and was thought to be recovering until he suffered a relapse.
MRS. J. W. EDWARDS DIES HERE AT 94
Resident of Georgia for More Than 80 Years.
Mrs. John W. Edwards, 94, a resident of Georgia for more than 80 years, died here yesterday at the home of a daughter, Mrs. W. B. Hughes, of 180 Eleventh street, northeast.
A native of Laurens, S. C., Mrs. Edwards moved to Cumming while a girl and had made her home here for the past 13 years.
Also surviving are another daughter, Mrs. John L. Phillips, of Atlanta; a son, L. Berry Edwards, of Atlanta; two brothers, John L. Cox, of Horton, Ala., and Manning Cox, of Kennesaw, Ga., and several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.
Funeral services will be conducted at 1:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon (E. S. T.) at the Friendship Baptist church, Cumming, by the Rev. T. P. Tribble. Burial will be in the Cumming cemetery under direction of Brandon-Bond-Condor.

GUILD LAWYERS DENY REDS RULE

Justice Pecora Charges Executive Board Controlled by Pro-Communists.
NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—(AP)—An assertion by State Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora that the executive board of the National Lawyers' Guild was controlled by pro-Communists was called "not only untrue but absurd" tonight by the New York chapter.
Pecora, retiring president of the guild, said he and at least 11 other state officials and lawyers would resign, probably tomorrow, and might organize a new body with objectives similar to those of the guild, if enough of the 3,300 members should follow the retiring faction.
The first resignation came shortly afterward from Frank P. Walsh, the guild's first president, now an honorary president and chairman of the state power authority.
Notified of his election to the guild's national executive board, Walsh wired the national secretary in Washington his declaration of the office and "to avoid a misunderstanding," his resignation as a member.
Pecora said the guild's executive board failed to approve an amendment to the constitution which would express opposition to all dictatorships.
The New York chapter's statement agreed with one issued by Municipal Judge John Gutknecht, of Chicago, the guild's new president, denying there was a split "on the issue of Communism, Nazism, Fascism or any other ism."

'PYGMALION' A HIT IN PREMIERE HERE

Performances of Wendy Hiller and Leslie Howard Highly Praised.
"In three months I could pass her off as a duchess at an ambassador's reception."
With that line Leslie Howard as Henry Higgins in George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" touched off an intriguing story which last night charmed a capacity audience attending the southern premiere of the picture at Loew's Grand theater.
Everything that has been said about Shaw's modern interpretation of the Greek myth is justly deserved. It is the story of an unconventional phonetics teacher who succeeded in transforming what he called "draggled-out guttersnipe" into a lady.
Eliza Doolittle (Wendy Hiller), who portrayed the guttersnipe and the lady, was excellent in a role that required delicate acting. Her interpretation was not excelled by that of Howard, however, who again amply justified his selection for "Gone With the Wind" by turning in his usual fine performance.
The picture is studied by many of Shaw's best witcrafts which occasionally fall flat because of the decided English accent of the actors. A good scene is that in which the "guttersnipe" is given a bath by Higgins' maid, Scott Sunderland, as Colonel Pickering, plays a good supporting role.
The picture should rank as one of the better presentations of the year.—L. G.

BIG CLIPPER CLIPS FLIGHT SPEED MARK

Reaches Hawaii in 15 Hours, 49 Minutes, Throttled Down.
HONOLULU, Feb. 23.—(AP)—The 74-passenger "super clipper" today bettered the speed record for flight between San Francisco bay and Hawaii.
It completed the 2,400-mile ocean trip in 15 hours 49 minutes on a "shakedown" flight.
The best previous time, 15 hours 51 1/2 minutes, was made by Amelia Earhart in her first start on a projected flight around the world in March, 1936.
Captain W. A. Cluthe, skipper of the huge clipper, said he kept the motors throttled down all the way, and circled over Honolulu for 45 minutes awaiting daylight for the landing.
The 42-ton plane, carrying 11 observers and a crew of 12, will fly to Midway island tomorrow, and then on to Hongkong.
CLIPPER FLIES EAST FOR TESTS
NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 23.—(AP)—The giant Boeing Clipper No. 17, en route from California to Baltimore to be tested in trans-Atlantic air service, stopped here today and will continue its flight eastward tomorrow morning.
The 74-passenger plane made the 300-mile flight from Galveston, Texas, in two hours.

VITAMIN A URGED FOR BETTER BRAINS

Milk, Eggs, Vegetables Are Stressed by Authority on Mental Diseases.
Better brains—the cure for cranky people—mean more Vitamin A.
And Vitamin A means milk, eggs, butter and green vegetables. Physical and mental makeups need the Vitamin A to maintain integrity of the nervous system. Without it changes occur in the spinal cord of middle-aged people.
The whys and wherefores of one of the leading factors in keeping health was explained and demonstrated here last night by Dr. Myrtle M. Canavan, authority on mental disease, before the Fulton County Medical Society.
She spoke at the fifth annual E. Bates Block memorial lecture at the Academy of Medicine. She is curator of the Warren Anatomical Museum at the Harvard Medical School. Dr. Block, who died in 1931, was Atlanta's first neurologist.
"One of the many causes of degenerative changes in the nervous system is the absence of the vitamin," she said. "The main changes shown by deficiency in Vitamin A is the degeneration of the covering of the nerve fibers. A sufficient quantity of Vitamin A is found in two glasses of milk, 1 egg, 3 pats of butter and ordinary amounts of green vegetables. The minimum requirements of an average man calls for 3,000 I. U. daily."
High costs of foods rich in the required substance often is the cause of its lack in the diet lists. Outdoor activity also was recommended.

13 Charges Drawn Against Woodrum

House Committee Votes 12 to 11 for Hearing on Indictment Against Georgia Jurist.

By The Associated Press.

Thirteen articles of impeachment, charging Superior Judge William Woodrum, of the Ogechee circuit, with bringing his court "into public scandal, disrepute and disgrace," were before the house of representatives yesterday.

Bearing 12-to-11 approval of the house committee on state of the republic, the impeachment resolution went on the calendar to await adoption or rejection by the entire house. Speaker Roy V. Harris said it would be considered "whenever the rules committee calls it up," but hinted action was unlikely until after completion of the 1939-41 appropriations bill.

The articles of impeachment, prepared by the state of republic committee, are equivalent to a bill of indictment and constitute the charges on which Judge Woodrum would be tried by the senate.

There seemed to be some question as to the house vote required to adopt the impeachment articles. The attorney general's office said the constitution was not specific on this point. One source in the law department expressed the opinion a minimum of 103 votes, a majority of the full membership, would be required for adoption but emphasized there had been no official ruling and there seemed to be no precedent.

Two-Thirds of Senate.

The constitution provides two-thirds of the senate membership must uphold the impeachment in order to effect removal from office.

Principal charges involve the Charlie Daughtry slaying in Screven county two years ago, in which Albert Cobb, Savannah attorney, and six other defendants, were tried for murder. Cobb was acquitted.

The first article charges that in November, 1937, Judge Woodrum "entered into a corrupt and criminal conspiracy with W. C. Neville, solicitor general of the Ogechee circuit of Georgia; R. Lee Moore, T. M. Price, E. J. Bowman, P. W. Martin, C. M. Daughtry and Tom D. Daughtry . . . to falsely and maliciously charge, indict and prosecute Cobb on the charge of murder. That through action of Judge Woodrum, Cobb was denied the right to seek a writ of habeas corpus, and that the jurist "did grossly abuse his discretion by refusing to grant bail for Cobb "after hearing evidence establishing the innocence of said Albert L. Cobb and after said Neville . . . failed to show any cause whatever for the refusal" to set bail.

Postponed Trial.

The article recites that on December 30, 1937, at a time when he knew he was disqualified in the case, Judge Woodrum granted a motion of Solicitor General Neville to reconvene the Screven county grand jury and postponed trial of the case, which had been fixed for January 2, 1938; that Woodrum made "a false statement . . . that he had been unable to procure a qualified jury from another circuit" to try the case, and was "insulting and abusive" toward the defendant's counsel.

The jurist is accused of issuing an order on January 13, 1938, restraining Sheriff J. J. Griffin, of Screven county, from complying with an order of Judge R. N. Hardeman, of the Middle circuit, to produce Cobb so the latter could apply for bail. And, also, although he had procured Judge Gordon Knox to try the case against Cobb, that he failed to have Knox preside because the latter "had granted bail to said Cobb on January 22, 1938, against the plan and conspiracy of the said Judge Woodrum and his co-conspirators . . ."

"Menaced Lawyers."

Referring to an exchange between Judge Woodrum and counsel for the defense on January 14, 1938, the articles accuse the jurist of menacing G. C. Dekle and G. C. Dekle Jr., with bodily harm with a heavy court seal and threatening to procure a pistol "to even things up" with the Dekles.

The charges further contend that on January 22, 1938, while seated at a table with prosecution attorneys, Judge Woodrum rose and argued with O. Frank Brandt, defense counsel, until Judge Knox commanded him to be seated.

Other articles of impeachment include charges:

2. That Judge Woodrum continued his "conspiracy" against Cobb after the original murder charge had been not-pressed, resulting in a second indictment for murder August 5, 1938.

3. That Judge Woodrum, between July 11 and August 5, 1938, "unlawfully" charged the grand jury that it could not subpoena Cobb for questioning, "charging the jury, in effect, to indict said Cobb" for the murder of Charlie Daughtry.

Extreme Bias.

4. That Judge Woodrum's extreme bias and prejudice in charging the grand jury created public prejudice against Cobb and influenced members of the jury to vote for indictment.

5. That on or about September 1, 1938, Judge Woodrum attempted "to corrupt a member of the general assembly" by proposing that A. H. Woods and P. H. Ricks approach Senate President John B. Spivey to obtain from him an agreement to oppose any attempt to impeach Judge Woodrum. In

Eleanore Whitney Gives Up Her Career In Films To Marry Ex-U. S. Attorney

Pretty Dancer "Trips" to Altar With Frederick Backer, Who Has Just Quit Federal Post.

Special to The Constitution.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—(P)—Pretty Eleanore Whitney gave up her career as a stage and screen dancer tonight at the altar.

She was married to Frederick Backer, 30, former assistant United States Attorney.

"I've retired to private life, and I want a simple wedding with no fuss," she said before the ceremony.

The 21-year-old star wore a white bridal gown with a hoop skirt. She had two attendants. Backer's brother, George, was best man. Rabbi Jonah B. Wise performed the ceremony. Only members of the families were present in the apartment of the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Sarah Backer, of New York.

Backer, 30, resigned from the government service today and will enter private business when the couple return from a South American honeymoon cruise.

Miss Whitney's career in the films came through her talent for dancing, a talent she was aided in developing by Bill Robinson, the famous hooper, who also has taught Shirley Temple the intricate steps she does.

Miss Whitney was born in Cleveland, Ohio, and attended public schools there. As a child, she was taken to New York and given her stage start by Rae Samuels, singer, who appeared on the vaudeville stage with her.

Some of the films in which she will be better remembered include "Turn Off the Moon," "The Big Broadcast of 1937," "Three Cheers for Love," and "Rose Bowl."

consideration of this, the article charges the jurist promised to obtain acquittal of Cobb.

6. That during Cobb's trial, in September, 1938, Judge Woodrum took a seat directly in front of the jury box and by his conduct and actions sought to influence the jury for a conviction; that these actions were such that Judge Charles Worrell, who was presiding in the case, was forced to instruct the jury to disregard Woodrum's conduct.

7. That on March 17, 1938, during contempt proceedings against Cobb, Judge Woodrum exhibited bias and malice and became "abusive, insulting and unfair" to the defendant, thus diminishing public confidence in the judge of the circuit.

8. That Judge Woodrum, on December 27, 1938, delayed procuring a qualified jury by refusing to grant bail for Cobb "after hearing evidence establishing the innocence of said Albert L. Cobb and after said Neville . . . failed to show any cause whatever for the refusal" to set bail.

9. That Judge Woodrum exhibited bias, prejudice and malice in all official rulings and actions involving Cobb.

10. That Judge Woodrum refused to remove P. W. Martin as court reporter for the case, although Martin had made statements he knew of evidence against Cobb and expressed opinion Cobb was guilty of murdering Daughtry. Also that Martin predicted before Cobb's trial, that Judge Woodrum would sit near the jury box and sanction to the jury by manner and act "what the prosecution charged."

11. That Judge Woodrum violated his oath of office in November, 1937, in a case involving Cleve and Leon Dixon, charging the jury on statements by the defendants which, in fact, never were made, and later deposing a motion for retrial without a formal hearing.

12. That Judge Woodrum, "in conspiracy" with Neville and Prince S. Preston, defense attorney, not-pressed a lottery indictment against H. H. Macon in Bulloch county "out of open court and contrary to the laws of Georgia."

13. That the "reasonable and probable consequence" of Judge Woodrum's actions is to bring the courts over which he presides "into public scandal, disrepute and disgrace."

The impeachment resolution was introduced by Representatives Fowler, of Trenton; Flanders, of Emanuel; DeFor, of McIntosh; Jones, of Brantley; Evans, of McDuffie, and Driskard, of Lincoln. Representative Smiley, of Liberty, who appeared as one of the original signers of the resolution, subsequently withdrew his name.

Judge Woodrum first was defended before the committee by William Schley Howard, Atlanta attorney, and later by Prince Preston and Representative Frank Gross, of Stephens. Representative Alexis Marshall, of Macon, and Albert Cobb appeared for the prosecution.

LEE J. RAGSDALE FUNERAL TODAY

Power Company Executive To Be Buried at Fairburn.

Lee J. Ragdsdale, 47, of 654 Coolidge avenue, N. E., supervisor of transmission lines for the Georgia Power Company, died late Wednesday night at his home.

A native of Banks county, Mr. Ragdsdale attended schools there and later studied engineering at Georgia Tech. He had been connected with the Power Company since 1913 and was credited with developing a number of devices for improving transmission facilities.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Alma Wilkerson Ragdsdale; a son, Harry Ragdsdale, a Georgia Tech student; two brothers, W. H. Ragdsdale, of Ensley, S. C., and Commander Hubert Ragdsdale, of the United States navy, and four sisters, Mrs. W. H. Chatham, of Cornelia; Mrs. Ben Smith, of Toccoa, and Mrs. W. D. Smith and Miss Vera Ragdsdale, both of Atlanta.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Virginia Avenue Baptist church, Fairburn, Ga., and burial will be under direction of Bishop & Poe.

'FRAMEUP' CHARGES HINES' ATTORNEY

Stryker Complains 'It Smells Like Something From Italy.'

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—(P)—Tammany District Leader James J. Hines, on trial for the second time on conspiracy charges as the accused political protector of the Dutch Schultz policy racket, was pictured today by his attorney as the victim of a prosecution which "smells like something from Italy."

All day long in general sessions court, Lloyd Paul Stryker, chief of the Hines counsel, roared out invective against the confessed participants in the Schultz syndicate whose testimony furnished the base of the state's case.

Weinberg Attacked.

The late gangster George Weinberg, who provided the most damaging testimony against Hines, was characterized by Stryker as "that crooked, dirty, lying, professional perjurer and convict."

Weinberg committed suicide in the early days of the current trial, necessitating the posthumous repetition of his testimony from the transcript of the first trial, and his suicide, Stryker claimed, indicated that the gangster was unwilling to face the jury from the witness box again.

Bribe Charges.

He pointed out, then, that Dewey in a bill of particulars had named City Magistrate Hulan Capshaw and former Tammany District Attorney William C. Dodge as officials "bribed, influenced or intimidated" by Hines to deal gently with the policy racket.

"If the bill of particulars was believed by the prosecutor," Stryker roared out, "it was his duty to indict these men, too."

"I'll tell you why they were not indicted: Because any lawyer—and Mr. Dewey is a capable lawyer—knew from the evidence that if he had attempted to try these men he would have made himself the laughingstock of the bar association."

The whole case, he shouted, was "one of the worst frameups I've ever seen in court."

MARION TALLEY IS DENIED WRIT

Lack of Jurisdiction Ruled by N. Y. Judge.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Feb. 23.—(P)—A habeas corpus proceeding by which Marion Talley, former Metropolitan Opera soprano, sought custody of her 3-year-old daughter, Susan, was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction today by Supreme Court Justice Gerald Nolan.

The action was aimed at her estranged husband and one-time voice teacher, Adolph Eckstrom, and his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer W. Nelson, of near-by Mamaroneck.

The suit, started two weeks ago, revealed publicly for the first time that Miss Talley was the mother of blonde Susan Eckstrom. Justice Nolan held no evidence had been presented to show that the Nelsons had custody of Susan. As to Eckstrom, he added, "It does not appear that the writ was served on him or that the court acquired jurisdiction over him in this proceeding."

TWO RAISES IN ONE NIGHT VOTED 7 CITY EMPLOYEES

City council's last meeting provided to be "bank night" for seven employees, it developed yesterday. After a thorough checkup of salary increases passed by council but held up by a notice of reconsideration, Comptroller B. Graham West discovered that each of seven employees of the Carnegie library had been voted two salary raises.

West pointed out that increases for the seven employees were approved by two separate groups. One had received approval of the finance committee, while the other was introduced by Alderman Robert Carpenter and included proposed raises for approximately 40 library employees.

Affected by this unusual action of council were Mary F. Cox, Susie L. Howard, Alma H. Jamison, Lucille Cobb, Margaret Woolfolk, Betty Hamilton and Fanny Hinton. Each of the raises amounted to $5 per month.

West's final compilation also showed that 148 raises affecting 141 persons had been voted. If finally approved by council and signed by Mayor Hartsfield they will cost the city $17,517.40 for the rest of the year and $21,020.88 per year thereafter. The number and amount of the raises had not been determined definitely until yesterday.

Commenting upon the increases Mayor Hartsfield said he thought it was a "sad commentary on the stamina of council" but expressed the hope the legislature would pass a charter amendment now pending preventing any salary increases except in the January finance sheet.

Thin Girls Must Carry Idea of Relaxing Into the Daily Dozen

MY DAY: Scholarship Offered By Youth Congress

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

NEW YORK CITY—Yesterday afternoon I went over to the Jewish Hospital of Brooklyn. The purpose of my visit was to see the ward in the pediatric department of the hospital, where the walls have been decorated with charming paintings taken from the illustrations by Paul Branson in Kenneth Grahame's book, "Wind in the Willows." Albert Cugat was the mural painter, and the decorations on this entire floor are the gift of one of the directors of the hospital, Mr. Louis M. Rabinowitz and his wife.

It is thought that these paintings have a special influence on the children because they are educational and serve to take their minds off their ailments. Some of the children start to copy the pictures and develop quite a talent for drawing. Mr. Rabinowitz told me he had one or two copies in his office, which he liked almost as much as he did the original paintings.

It was a delight to go through a hospital where there was nothing to criticize and where a real personal touch was evident throughout. This is brought about, I imagine, by the interest of the women's group connected with the hospital.

In the evening, I went to the dinner given by the American Youth Congress, at which they announced a fellowship which they are going to give annually to some young person, who will travel abroad or in his own country and bring back his observations and the knowledge which he acquires to the members of the Youth Congress.

The American Youth Congress is a federation of a number of youth organizations. Last night they entertained many of the people in New York city, who have stood for progress in the city and for devoted service in one line or another over a long period of years.

Naturally, in an organization of this kind there must be no question of political partisanship, and so Mrs. Mildred Hollingsworth, one of the leaders of the Republican women, presented her party's point of view. She looked very young and pretty. I thought it showed a fine spirit of co-operation for her to come to this dinner.

Mr. Adolf Berle presided. Mr. Archibald Macleish spoke with grace and feeling. Mr. Joseph Cadden gave an interesting talk on the work which the congress is undertaking, and the evening closed with a most amusing speech by Mr. John Kieran. He is always a joy and I wish he could have taken up more time.

I am much touched by the gesture which these young people have made in naming the scholarship after me. I hope that it will prove of real value in helping them to understand the problems which they have to meet.

By brother insisted that when the dinner was over, Miss Thompson and I should join his party at the hotel. I was anxious to see my young niece who was here for a day and one of my brother's party, so we went up there and enjoyed the floor show which began soon after our arrival.

Today being a holiday, I have had a voice lesson. I have been to the dentist, and I have seen four members of my family. Isn't that a good way to spend a holiday?

Testimony on Shortage of Vitamin A

By Dr. William Brady.

Herr Doctor W. Stahl pleads a strong case for the apocryphal hypovitaminosis, nutritional disturbance or disease due to insufficient vitamin A, in the Berlin Klinische Wochenschrift, November 26, 1938. German medical science has been very busy with scientific facts which sheer fancy or theory in a dish that is so very easy to eat but later gives you remorse. The earlier descriptions of the value and effects and freedom from untoward or dangerous effects of new nostrums, remaining from Germany illustrate this trait.

When a German doctor cuts loose, even though you are a skeptic at the beginning, you had better look out. I think it only fair to mention this before we get any in a dither about the still enigmatic role of vitamin A in human metabolism.

In women past the menopause a peculiar condition occurs along with some chronic arthritis, which has become known as Sjogren's syndrome. It is characterized by great dryness of all the mucous membranes from deficient secretion of the glands, particularly the tear glands and the salivary glands, the mucous glands in the upper respiratory tract, the sweat glands and the glands of the stomach. Due to these glandular weaknesses the patient suffers from dry eyes and chronic irritation or soreness of the eyes, dry mouth, chronic dry "catarrh" of nose, throat or bronchial tubes, difficulty in swallowing, impaired sense of smell, impaired sense of taste, deficient sweating, lack of gastric juice to digest food, general weakness, loss of appetite, lowered tolerance for carbohydrate, muscular atrophy, sometimes fever and anemia.

Right here O' Doc Brady, who knows no more and no less than any one else about it, interposes the suggestion that lack of sufficient vitamin B complex in the daily intake is as likely to account for many of these conditions as is insufficient vitamin A. Take it or leave it. It is just my notion.

Anyway Herr Doctor Stahl believes the vitamin A content of the average diet is insufficient in these cases, and he describes one instance of a woman aged 64 years where the administration of 16,000 units of vitamin A as a supplement to the diet, daily for several months, brought about remarkable improvement. The inflammatory manifestations in all the mucous membranes subsided, the patient recovered normal sense of taste and smell, swallowing became easier, sweating returned, the chronic conjunctivitis and photophobia (abnormal sensitivity) disappeared, the general condition was much improved.

To the layman 16,000 units may sound like a lot of something. Really it is not so much. Remember, there are several million (as nearly as I dare estimate, what with my terrible criticism) red corpuscles in a drop of blood.

There are 30,000 units of vitamin A in 3 1/2 ounces of dandelion greens; 1,000 units in a pint of fresh milk; 250 units in a banana; 8,000 units in 3 1/2 ounces of turnip greens; 3,000 units in a sweet potato; 20,000 units in 3 1/2 ounces of spinach; 500 units in the yolk of an egg.

She Won't Stop Dating Other Men

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Miss Chatfield: We've both been married; neither of us is yet divorced, and I hope to make her my wife when we are free. She has three children and works hard for a small salary so I have told her that whenever she's in a tight place she's to ask me for a lift, which she has done several times. We don't live near each other and consequently I cannot see her as often as I would like which seems to be the cause of my unhappiness.

I have not dated anybody else since I fell for her but she goes right on dating other men. Sometimes when I have stood all I can, I accuse her of not giving me an even break. She tells me that if we lived in the same town she wouldn't want any other friends but that I should have a heart for a lonely woman and let her have fun without cutting up about it. In other words I am selfish and should be ashamed of myself. What do you think?

B. J.

Answer: Friend, nothing is in the clear; neither your legal status, nor your financial shenanigans, nor your personal relationship. Regretting to put notions in your head that will plough up her clover patch, I'd say the lady is taking you for a good thing and you areappy to permit it.

A woman who accepts money from a man before she's married to him, on the ground that she will some day be his wife, gives him an IOU which protects him against loss, and she assumes an obligation that is embarrassing, paid or unpaid; for the lender becomes more and more irritable as time passes and payments are deferred. To say the least she's guilty of bad taste. Strike One.

A woman in love with a man, expecting to marry him, has no interest in other men than a cat has in a cactus. And any man who lets a gal talk him out of acceptance of this fact has a lot in common with a jelly fish. There's always something wrong when a gal is trying to talk herself out of a defensive position by putting the onus on the other party. Strike Two.

If there is anybody in the world that aims to please it's a lovin' woman. There are no renunciations that she will refuse to make, no reasonable (or unreasonable) conditions she won't meet when she understands from the lips of the dear one what is wanted, what expected and what will satisfy. Strike Three.

Now friend in the parlance of the diamond, you're out. What do you think about it?

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Common cruelties: Nit-wits making obvious puns on man's name (of which he's had a gagging surfeit) expecting him to be convulsed at the conviviality. Children dangling before anguished eyes of playmates a family skeleton which his parents have kept closeted from him.

Training Dogs Made Easy

Such a clever fellow! How smartly he performs when told to "sing."

Easy to teach smart tricks like this one to your dog. Just be sure he's at least three months old before you begin his lessons, get his cheerful co-operation by treating each training period in the spirit of a game. Say to him, "We're going to have some fun today—we'll learn a brand-new trick."

Even though he doesn't understand your words, he hears the good humor and patience in your voice—knows you're his friend.

For the "sing" trick, blow several notes softly onto a harmonica, then say "sing." Repeat until Mr. Dog lets out a howl or a whine. Then reward his "song" with a friendly pat, a loud encouraging "That's the boy." He'll soon get the idea and "sing" at your command.

Just as simple to teach your pet other clever tricks: How proud you'll be of him when he has learned to do "sleepy dog," "chase your tail" and "Say Your Prayers."

Your dog will progress faster in his training if he takes orders from one person only. And of course he'll be more alert when he's in good condition.

Keep him healthy by giving him right foods, right care. Do you know what meats and fish to feed? The meat percentage of vegetables, bread and other starchy foods? What to do when ailments threaten?

Have a healthy happy dog! Our new 40-page booklet, "How To Raise and Train Your Dog," gives complete instructions for feeding, grooming, house manners. What to do in case of distemper, other ailments. Directions by a famous trainer for teaching 20 clever tricks. Lists and describes breeds of dogs.

Balanced Three-Step Treatment Helps Restore Youthful Freshness to Skin

By LILLIAN MAE.

Have you ever thought how much an investment in scientific beauty preparations and youthful glowing make-up, increase a woman's social and earning power, and bring forth while returns in greater beauty and a fuller life?

If you haven't ever thought seriously of these things, dwell upon the thought awhile, and I believe you'll agree with me.

For instance, there's a type of American skin which tends to be very dry and sensitive—flaky and drawn-looking. Such a skin does not fit in with soft, glowing femininity—the quality attributed to American women. Well, there's a remedy, in a perfectly balanced three-step treatment which will help your skin to retrieve the suppleness, youthful freshness and radiance stolen from it by cold winter winds, steam heat and the hectic pace of our modern life.

This marvelous treatment consists of soothing, purifying pasteurized cream, a rich, youthifying tissue cream in which herbal essences and balsams are blended and a skin toning lotion to brace the tissues, close the pores and refine skin tissues.

Now to the nicest part of this treatment! For one week, the lovely woman who has done so much to help other women look their very sweetest and best, is offering this treatment at a reduction of 20 per cent of the usual price.

If, for one, intend dashing out and building up my supply of cosmetics while these so worth-while ones may be purchased at this great reduction in price.

If you will phone me, I'll tell you where the items may be purchased in Atlanta. If you do not live in the city, write, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Hi-Jack Double Used Against Overall Bids

By Harold Sharpsteen.

Grand Rapids, Mich. Mr. Harold Sharpsteen:

My partner and I have been using your hi-jack double against opponents' suit overall bids at low levels for nearly a year, both in rubber bridge and tournament play. We have decided it is the biggest point winner of our bidding repertoire.

Have you any similar set-up as a counter defensive bid to use when second hand overcalls partner's opening suit bid with one no-trump instead of a suit? If you have we would certainly like to hear about it.

RICHARD H. DEAN. TENTATIVE DOUBLE.

"Light" or tentative doubles of adverse one no-trump overcalls are not new in bridge. Many players, in their anxiety, to take the bidding away from opponents, have just been too busy to recognize the advantage of stopping to double for penalties.

Requirements to double an adverse one no-trump overall are simple.

(1) Partner has opened the bidding in a suit.

(2) Opponent overcalls defensively, with one no-trump.

(a) About 2 1/2 honor-tricks minimum.

(b) AXX . . . KXX . . . QXX . . . JXXX in partner's bid suit.

(c) Distributed strength.

DOUBLER'S ADVANTAGES.

The first advantage is an apparent five-honor-trick minimum in combined hands. Doubler has a second advantage of knowing what suit to lead.

If partner's opening bid turns out to be more than a minimum, the penalty should be about three tricks.

The ideal opening lead is usually a low card in partner's bid suit, retaining the high honor over declarer.

Opening bidder is expected to pass the double of one no-trump unless his hand is badly unbalanced. Holding a two suiter or a long suit too weak to establish at no-trump, opening bidder may take out.

New York Debs Crowd Hotel For Look at Mickey Rooney

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 23.—Mrs. Knute Rockne is demanding $50,000 from Warner Brothers for the privilege of letting them film the life story of her famous late husband. A compromise will probably be effected. . . . Cary Grant tells me that he only has 18 per cent of his income left after paying income tax, agents' fees, etc. Cary gets $150,000 per picture—makes three a year. I guess he is still able to keep the wolf from the door. . . . For the first time in his Hollywood career, slow-coach Joseph Von Sternberg is on schedule with his picture, "Sergeant Madden."

Overheard, Robert Taylor telling Clark Gable that he will enjoy working with Vivien Leigh in "Gone With the Wind."

"If you remember, Vivien was the virgin who tried to ruin Bob's life in 'A Yank at Oxford'."

I had a laugh when informed that Victor Fleming would take over George Cukor's directorial reins in the "G. W. T. W." epic. What about that vacation you were going to have after The Wizard of Oz? Mr. Fleming, where no one could find you—"not even you?" I understand Mr. Fleming will be paid $150,000 for the chore. I don't blame him for changing his mind. One can always have a vacation, but it is not so easy to find $150,000. And, in my humble opinion, Fleming is a much better man for this particular job than Cukor.

When Mahomet won't go to the mountain, the mountain must go to Mahomet. In other words, Greta Garbo has refused to leave her Santa Barbara hideaway for story conferences in Hollywood. So the executives have been going up to Santa Barbara to iron out script difficulties in "Ninotchka."

I understand that Mickey Rooney, now in New York, is giving the sub debs of that city a great and wonderful thrill. They cluster in their hundreds outside the hotel in which Mickey has a magnificent suite, waiting hours in hopes of saying "Hello" as he leaves the hotel for his car. Lana Turner is the only young woman in Hollywood who still wears a beauty spot—usually on her chin.

Lionel Barrymore is the latest mayor—his official title is mayor of Reseda. . . . Robert Young is the latest filmitte to move to the North Ridge section of the San Bernardino valley. Let's hope that the tourists who have already driven out Clark Gable and Barbara Stanwyck, will allow Mr. Young and his family to live in peace. . . . Russian Gregory Ratoff came into the Twentieth Century-Fox commissary, where several Blackfoot Indians (working in the new Shirley Temple picture) were eating lunch. Said Gregory to Nigel Bruce and Basil Rathbone, "My goodness, if I weren't so hungry I wouldn't eat with these foreigners." I think—and hope—he was joking.

Maxie Rosenbloom has offered to march with Geraldine Fitzgerald in the St. Patrick's Day parade.

Hedy Lamarr has the largest appetite of the lady stars in Hollywood. Recently at lunch I saw her polish off a bowl of soup and a man-size steak, topped off with a large chunk of apple pie. And—can you beat it?—Hedy did not gain an ounce in weight. She is one of those lucky females who can eat all they want and remain slender. (Ah, me!)

Incidentally, David Niven was in Miss Goddard's party, and the couple made no secret of their admiration for each other.

An agent had been trying for six weeks to sell a story to a producer. "Tell you what I'll do," said the producer finally "Give me until tomorrow, and I'll give you a definite maybe."

Go Loose and Limber—To Relieve That Tension!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Fat or thin, you must exercise to streamline your changing weight. But the highly strung thin girls must carry the idea of relaxing right into the daily dozen, while the overweights should give it everything they have.

If you are thin, exercise is apt to leave you overstimulated and that increases your expenditure of nervous energy. That can be avoided by taking the exercises slowly and easily and by flopping between each exercise. Learn to let yourself go loose and limber.

Overweights need to work harder. Unless your overweight is so excessive that you risk overtaxing your heart, you can slim off the inches as fast as you please, never forgetting that exercise is your chance of removing most of the excess from waist and hips. But you should begin easily, increase the exercises gradually, and adopt the underweight idea of relaxing between exercises to avoid being stiff the next day.

Here is an exercise that is both a waistline slimmer and a relaxer.

Stand with feet apart and parallel, hands down at the sides. Bend the right knee and transfer the weight to the right foot, flinging the arms in the same direction as the weight shift. Then shift to the left foot, left knee bent and most of the weight on the left foot, arms flung to the left. Try to make the weight transfer an easy, rhythmic action and keep the feet on the floor. After you get the swing of it, let the head and trunk enter freely into the movement.

Now, be a rag doll! Stand with the feet quite so far apart but still parallel and drop the trunk acutely to the right side—just as if you were on a hinge. Then roll the trunk from the waist until it dangles in front, letting the knees sag slightly. Flop to the left side and down in front. Repeat until you feel entirely free from tension.

That acute sideward bend in the foregoing relaxing exercise is also a quick reducer for the waist. That makes it a good addition to any set of waistline exercises.

Hollow thighs are the especial problem of the thin girl and a der-riere is usually the parking place for too much fat. Here is another fat-and-thin exercise that is very effective:

Stand so that you can support yourself with one hand braced on a chairback and raise the opposite knee to right angles. Hold the knee at this height and swing it out to the extreme side, then stretch the leg straight out in back. Do the exercise slowly and repeat five times before changing to the other leg. This one is a marvel for strengthening the inner thigh muscles, reducing ugly fat pads on the outer thigh, and slimming the hips in back. Finish by shaking each leg from the hips to free it from tension.

Dignity, Charm In French Furniture

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

The gentle charm of French provincial furniture dawned on us some years ago after we learned to appreciate the simple sincere beauty of early American maple and pine. There is about both a friendly livable quality, a dignified informality.

Leisurely and Honest. But French provincial furniture bears a much nearer kinship to the court furniture of seventeenth and eighteenth century Paris than early American bears to its English ancestors. For in America, the colonists were concerned with stern utility and had to use tools and materials at hand. While in France at this time, the provinces had reached a more leisurely prosperous standard of living. And so they copied court furniture in simplified versions, retaining a certain grace and adding an honest directness to the designs.

French provincial furniture, therefore, has a good deal of refinement for all its pleasant domesticity, its respect for its home-ly role. Its curve and flow of line has none of the elegant pretense of French court furniture, though its family resemblance is obvious.

The panels and grooves, the turns and pulls have an asymmetric rhythm of curve. The hardware is detailed, hearty, but always utilitarian. The provincial cabinet makers borrowed freely from Louis XIV designs but never took much to the straighter, subtler lines of Louis XV styles.

Beds Were Rooms. The repertoire of furniture in this style seldom ventured far from the necessities. Included were: beds which were practically closets themselves so well as to be made of wood and not of metal; wardrobes or cabinets to hold clothes and other belongings for the built-in closet was all but unknown; buffets and dining room cupboards to hold supplies; the hanging wall shelves that were and still are so convenient for china and pewter, and of course chairs, many of them with rush seats, and nearly all with chair backs of distinction.

Walnut, fruitwoods and oak were the most familiar woods used for French provincial furniture. And usually in natural waxed finishes without elaborate dressing of the wood. Accessories that traditionally go with this type of furniture are equally as pleasing as it is. The popular toile de Jouy printed fabrics and wallpapers belong to the same time and place of our most cherished inheritances from France.

The lumberjack dress is the latest excitement among two-pieceers. You can see why fashion took a look at the sturdy, masculine lumberjack, and decided it had possibilities of feminine charm. So here it is, (in 1693-B) with the bloused waist above a wide belt that does such nice things to the figure. The shoulders are smooth and wide. The sleeves, pockets and turn-over collar flaunt gay rows of braid—and you should use gay and decorative buttons on your lumberjack blouse.

The skirt has a jaunty, slim-hipped fullness that goes perfectly with the casual, spirited blouse. This is one of those lucky two-pieceers that pair off admirably with other things. Make this, for business and runabout, of thin wool, flat crepe or the silk—and repeat it, later on, in summer sports clothes.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1693-B is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 14 (32) requires 4-8 yards of 39-inch material; 2-1-4 yards of 36-inch.

Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins To Observe Fiftieth Wedding Date Today

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Jenkins will observe their fiftieth wedding anniversary today at their home at 854 Rosedale road in Druid Hills. No invitations have been issued but Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins will be at home informally to receive their friends who call to offer congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins are numbered among Atlanta's most beloved and highly esteemed citizens. They came to this city for residence soon after their marriage 50 years ago in Hamilton, Ga. Throughout the years of their married life they have taken an active part in this city's development. Until 12 years ago they resided in West End, where they were prominent members of Park Street Methodist church. Since living in the Druid Hills section they have been members of Druid Hills Methodist church.

Mrs. Jenkins is a valuable member of the Atlanta Chapter, U. D. C., in which organization she has held several offices and, as vice president of Uncle Remus Memorial Association, she takes an active part in that organization's program.

Before her marriage Mrs. Jenkins was Miss Sally Gimbrough, member of prominent families in Harris and Talbot counties. Mr. Jenkins also belongs to well-known Georgia families and he was born and reared in this city. Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins are the parents of William A. Jenkins, one of Atlanta's outstanding leaders. Their grandchildren are Mrs. Collett Munger and Miss Sarah Jenkins, popular members of the city's younger society. Collett Munger III is their only great-grandchild.

Mrs. Reuben Arnold Honored at Shower.

Mrs. Reuben Lee Arnold, popular bride, was honored at a miscellaneous shower recently given by Miss Margaret Christian and Mrs. Albert Westmoreland at the latter's home on Claire drive.

Mrs. Flynn Haygood, mother of the bride, assisted in entertaining. Contest prizes were awarded Sara Arnold and Sara Joiner.

Present were Mesdames Lee Roach, Vivian Wade, Albert Westmoreland, Reuben Arnold, Morris Leffkoff, Alex Adov, Flynn Haygood, O. O. Steed, S. E. Walker, W. J. Waldrup and the Misses Etta Warshaw, Loraine Berger, Sara Arnold, Dorothy Westmoreland, Margaret Christian, Norma Westmoreland and Sara Joiner, of Albany.

SCISSORS

Silhouette

Behold the pinafore... complete with a guimpe! The pinafore, spattered with crisp white daisies, comes in navy or black. The guimpe, which is changeable, in frosty-white embroidered organdy.

Navy or black sheer... the bodice punctuated with white polka dots, the tiny waist accented with a Kelly green belt. Immaculate white silk pique makes the collar and cuffs.

We borrow from Little Lord Fauntleroy a white collar and velvet bow to add a childish charm to this green and white silk print. Buttons, pockets, and bow in deep, lush, green velvet.

Navy alpaca... alive with white polka dots. Pert white grosgrain outlines the neck, and ties a bow around the sleeves.

Flattering... feminine... this navy sheer wears pink grosgrain bows jauntily on its lapels.

To mould you into a slim sheath, this garment has a little laced panel to pull in your diaphragm and give you that spare-rib look. Zipper side fastening, satin panels, reinforced lace uplift. Expertly designed by an outstanding Paris couturier, and executed by one of our leading corsetieres.

Flattering, youthful... the scissors silhouette. It typifies the high, wide shoulders, the diminutive waist, the flaring, full skirt... the pattern made by an open pair of scissors. It's a silhouette that embodies the basque jacket, the pin-wheel, gypsy, and pleated skirts, the new flared shirtwaist dresses, and the pinafore. Because it broadens shoulders, nips in the waist, and doesn't hug the hips, it makes you appear incredibly slim.

Camp Fire Girls Plan Leadership Training

Leadership training in the Camp Fire Girls' program was given Wednesday and will continue on Wednesday and Friday for three consecutive weeks, meeting from 10 to 12 o'clock at the Georgia Evening school, 162 Luckie street, Room 105. The two classes this week are for beginners and include new leaders already meeting with groups, and others who are interested in learning what Camp Fire Girls do in their program of activities. The other four classes will be planned for both experienced and inexperienced leaders and will include actual craft work and program planning. This course will supplement the fall training course which was held at many of the guardians to complete their 12 hours of training required for a national certificate.

Mrs. E. L. Hardy, chairman of education for the Guardians' Association, says that one of the objectives of the course for 1939 is to have every leader a trained leader, with a national certificate. Many new groups have formed in the Atlanta Council since the training course in November.

The classes will be conducted by Mrs. Virginia Beals, local executive secretary, who will be assisted by Miss Capitola B. Mattingly, field secretary of the council.

To Sponsor Benefit.

The Atlanta Chapter No. 134, of Aleph Zadikim, Junior Order of B'nai B'rith, will sponsor a benefit bridge on March 1 at 8:15 p. m. The entire proceeds from this bridge will be used to help rehabilitate European youths in Palestine. The National Order of A. Z. A. is raising a fund to further this work.

Bernard Cohen is chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangement and he will be assisted by Abner Cohen, chairman of tickets; Mack Beerman, chairman of prizes; Melvin Silverman, chairman of refreshments, and Louis Siegel, chairman of publicity.

The senior and junior chapters of Hadassah are co-operating with A. Z. A. in this project. Tickets may be obtained by calling Main 9358.

Upchurch-McCardle.

LAGRANGE, Ga., Feb. 23.—Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Frances Jeannette Upchurch and James Rupert McCardle, of Columbus, which was quietly solemnized Sunday at the home of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stokes McCardle, in Columbus.

The bride was becomingly attired in a tailored suit worn with hat and accessories in japonica. Her bouquet was a shoulder spray of orchids.

Mr. and Mrs. McCardle left for a trip to Cuba, after which they will return to Columbus for residence, where the former is manager of a wholesale beauty supply company.

The bride is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Upchurch, of LaGrange, and sister of Mrs. L. H. Kirkpatrick, James and Lamar Upchurch, of LaGrange. She is a graduate of the LaGrange high school and the LaGrange Opportunity School.

TARZAN AND THE ELEPHANT MEN No. 113

Tarzan fled because on the field he could add only his own strength to the battle, but his new plan meant adding the strength of many men to the army of Thudis. He circled the city to the north, scaled the wall, and ran through the deserted street to the slave-pen.

Here he stirred a sudden uprising of the slaves, for most of the guards had gone out to fight. Then he and Stanley Wood led this desperate band to the palace, where they quickly freed Gofala. She ran, weeping for joy, into the comforting arms of her fiancé.

Ten minutes later Tarzan appeared on the battlefield at the head of his motley throng. Even Spike and Troll were in the band. Although they had killed Tarzan while he was a prisoner in the slave-pen, they hoped now to win his favor for their own purposes.

With shouts of encouragement and by the example of his own matchless bravery, Tarzan led his men to attack the Athean army from the rear. But even this brilliant strategy was no guarantee of victory, for the Atheans were still more powerful in point of numbers.

F. D. R. SHIP HINTS DECISIVE 'BATTLE'

Secrecy Emphasized; Travelers Report Six British Destroyers Off Jamaica.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Indications that a decisive "battle" had been or was about to be fought in the fleet's continental defense war games were seen today in a late dispatch from the cruiser Houston.

The message from the ship on which President Roosevelt is cruising made no mention of the fleet maneuvers for the first time since it left Key West last Saturday.

An earlier message saying there would be no radio dispatch today for the press gave rise to a belief that the critical stage of the maneuvers already had been reached and the President decided to wait until this phase had been passed before making reports again.

When a dispatch finally arrived stating the Houston visited the Virgin Islands during the day, but making no mention of the maneuvers, it was felt here the "zero hour" might not have been reached today, but was close at hand.

Meanwhile, returning travelers from South America, Cuba and the West Indies brought word—unconfirmable in official quarters—that the American merchant marine and commercial aircraft were aiding the "Black" defending fleet.

Others returning from the tropics said they had noticed half a dozen British destroyers off Jamaica, British island in the Caribbean south of Cuba, but had no explanation for their presence there.

Still other persons coming back from Puerto Rico said they had noticed a force of American naval vessels and planes around Windward Passage between Cuba and Haiti.

Housewives who sit down when- ever for a meal in preparing vegetables or doing other chores can save a good deal of energy, home economists say.

GEORGE PRAISES

OPERATION OF RFC

She Will Obtain Reno Divorce, He Announces.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Feb. 23. (AP)—Wallace Beery, screen actor, and his second wife, the former Arieta Gillman, of Astoria, Ore., announced tonight that Mrs. Beery would leave soon for Reno to bring divorce proceedings.

Beery said he would remain at the family home here until Mrs. Beery leaves for Nevada, perhaps next Monday.

"The whole thing is being arranged on such an amicable basis that we aren't even having a lawyer," the actor said. "We have agreed that our daughter, Carol Ann, will spend six months of the year with each of us."

Carol Ann, the child of Beery's aunt, the late Juanita Priestner, was adopted by the Beerys in 1932 when she was 18 months of age.

The couple were married in 1924. Beery's first wife was Gloria Swanson.

Krieger Wins Over Brown by Technical Kayo in 9th Round

by Jack Troy

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 23.—It happened that the good ship Annie Laurie was heading out to sea today and so it was no trouble at all to arrange for a ride.

Annie Laurie never went past the breakers on account of the unsettled weather, but the hitchhike was worth the trouble on account of the fact that when they dropped anchor the smaller fish were biting according to form.

There was not the usual blue sky, but a sky of overcast gray, with scudding rain clouds threatening all the while. There was no rain because of the busy winds that always accompany such weather conditions.

All this interfered with a trip outside. And so the party was perfectly content to cast for groupers and other fighting fish of a smaller order in a quiet spot adjacent to the harbor.

V. P. Warren, who was skipper of the Annie Laurie, suggested outside passage if the party so desired, but there was unanimous consent to skip the rougher details.

Groupers came into the boat by the score and proved very edible in the skilled hands of Henry, who had stocked up with grease and butter and was ready to prepare a luncheon which the most discerning could enjoy.

I am not sure that many folks make provisions for cooking fish as they are caught, but in the event that this item is overlooked, I must add, in all fairness, that it is all a big mistake.

And so we hauled the fish in and Henry took care of everything else, including coffee he had prepared over a galley fire. It is really different. Coffee made either in the great outdoors or in such a spot as a galley somehow hits the spot.

A PHONEY FIGHT.

It becomes more distressing than somewhat to wait around for a couple of fights that have been postponed because of reasons not quite clear.

There was no rain last night and it was much clearer today, although there was a brisk tail wind out of the southwest. The third man becomes important.

Choice of referee remains the chief topic of conversation. Dempsey likes Brown's chances. And so does Mike Jacobs. So the odds are prohibitive. The referee is most important.

QUITE A WRANGLE.

There has been quite a wrangle over officials. It seems strange that the fight should argue so strongly for their own men, except that Ben Brown has come along rapidly and is a real challenger for middleweight honors.

Brown, the nut-browed bomber from the Gate City, carries the hopes of countless Georgians who expect to see him carve an even greater niche than did Young Stribling, who never won a title.

Everything is set for Brown if he wins.

Ben will be sitting on easy street if he is able to outlast the rugged Jewish champion. All it means to him is a choice billing in eastern rings.

It really doesn't matter whether or not Galento knocks out Feldman in the early stages of the farcical match which follows Brown and Krieger.

Ben has got ready for this fight as he never prepared for a fight before. He has paid strict attention to diet and road work. And consequently is at the peak of preparedness.

It may not do him any good, even taking into consideration that he has one of the finest left hands in the game, but he can box with the best and the fact that he is faster than the best middleweight remains a factor in his favor.

It is a very fortunate thing for the Greater Miami Sporting Corporation that such a bout is scheduled. Otherwise, there might not be such a big gate.

The fight followers have smelled a rat, so to speak, and want no part of a Galento-Feldman bout. This simply means that the choice of referee must conform with the public's wishes. Else there might be a terrific clamor for justice.

CELEBRITIES ABOUND.

There was certainly no lack of celebrities present for the fight in Miami's Orange Bowl. They make big social affairs out of the sporting events here.

Among those to be seen in ringside seats were Postmaster General James J. Farley, Fred Astaire, Gene Tunney, Jack Dempsey, Jess Willard, Charles Francis (Socker) Coe, Gar Wood, Tom Heney, Johnny Risko, Lew Tendler, Abe Attell, N. B. Woolworth, Herbert Bayard Swope, William Ziegler Jr., Raymond and Winston Guest, Jack Chrysler, Leonard Sachs, Mickey Rooney, H. F. du Pont, and many others.

Leading figures of the political, business and professional world, screen idols and stars of the theater thus made up a goodly part of the gathering.

BROWN CONFIDENT.

In spite of a sudden cold snap, there was a fine crowd here for the fight program. In his dressing room Ben Brown appeared calm and cool. He kidded with Tony Galento and Joe, the Yussell, Jacobs. Brown seemed supremely confident. He was ready to make the supreme effort of his career. Ringside odds remained 7 to 5 in favor of Champion Solly Krieger.

REGATTA CANCELLED.

WEST PALM BEACH, Feb. 23.—(P)—The final day's events of the Palm Beach Yacht Club's Washington birthday regatta were cancelled at noon today because of continued heavy winds and choppy waters.

ATLANTA BOXER, STILL ON FEET, PROTESTS STOP

Galento Awarded T. K. O. Over Feldman in Third Round.

By JACK TROY.
ORANGE BOWL STADIUM, MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 23.—Ben Brown, as game a fighter as ever stepped into a ring, suffered a technical knockout at the hands of Solly Krieger, world's middleweight champion, in the ninth round of their scheduled 10-round non-title fight tonight.

On his feet and still punching with only 11 seconds left to go in the ninth, Referee Phil O'Connell stepped between the fighters and stopped the bout.

Elapsed time was two minutes and 39 seconds in the ninth round.

BROWN PROTESTS.
The fight was stopped over the vigorous protest of Brown, who was bleeding at the mouth and hardly was able to see out of his right eye. He was still on his feet, however, and was weathering everything the champion offered.

It hardly seemed the fair thing to stop the fight, since Brown stood a good chance to get no worse than a draw. He was the aggressor in all the early rounds and had piled up a flock of points with a stinging left.

Krieger was bleeding at the mouth and nose early in the fight as Brown raked him with rights and lefts. Ben was boxing beautifully.

Ben went down in the fourth from a hard left, but was up without a count. Krieger ran into a jabbing left in the sixth and also went down for no count.

WILD NINTH ROUND.
The ninth round was a wild affair. Krieger sent Ben to the ropes and, in a wild exchange, both fighters fell out of the ring. They were shoved back by newspapermen.

Krieger hurt Ben with hard rights and lefts to head and body, and it may have been the blood that influenced the referee to stop it with Brown still throwing punches.

Brown was not stunned and made a statement from the ringside as Krieger's hand was raised in victory. He pleaded that he was all right and certainly seemed able to finish.

It was remarkable, indeed, that Brown should suffer the first knockout of his career while standing on his feet and still boxing in.

The crowd gave Ben a great hand and there was a lot of question in the minds of many as to why Brown wasn't given a chance to finish the final 11 seconds of the round.

ATLANTA BOY LEADS.
Up to this point, Brown had a lead on points. There had been, of course, a knockdown on each side.

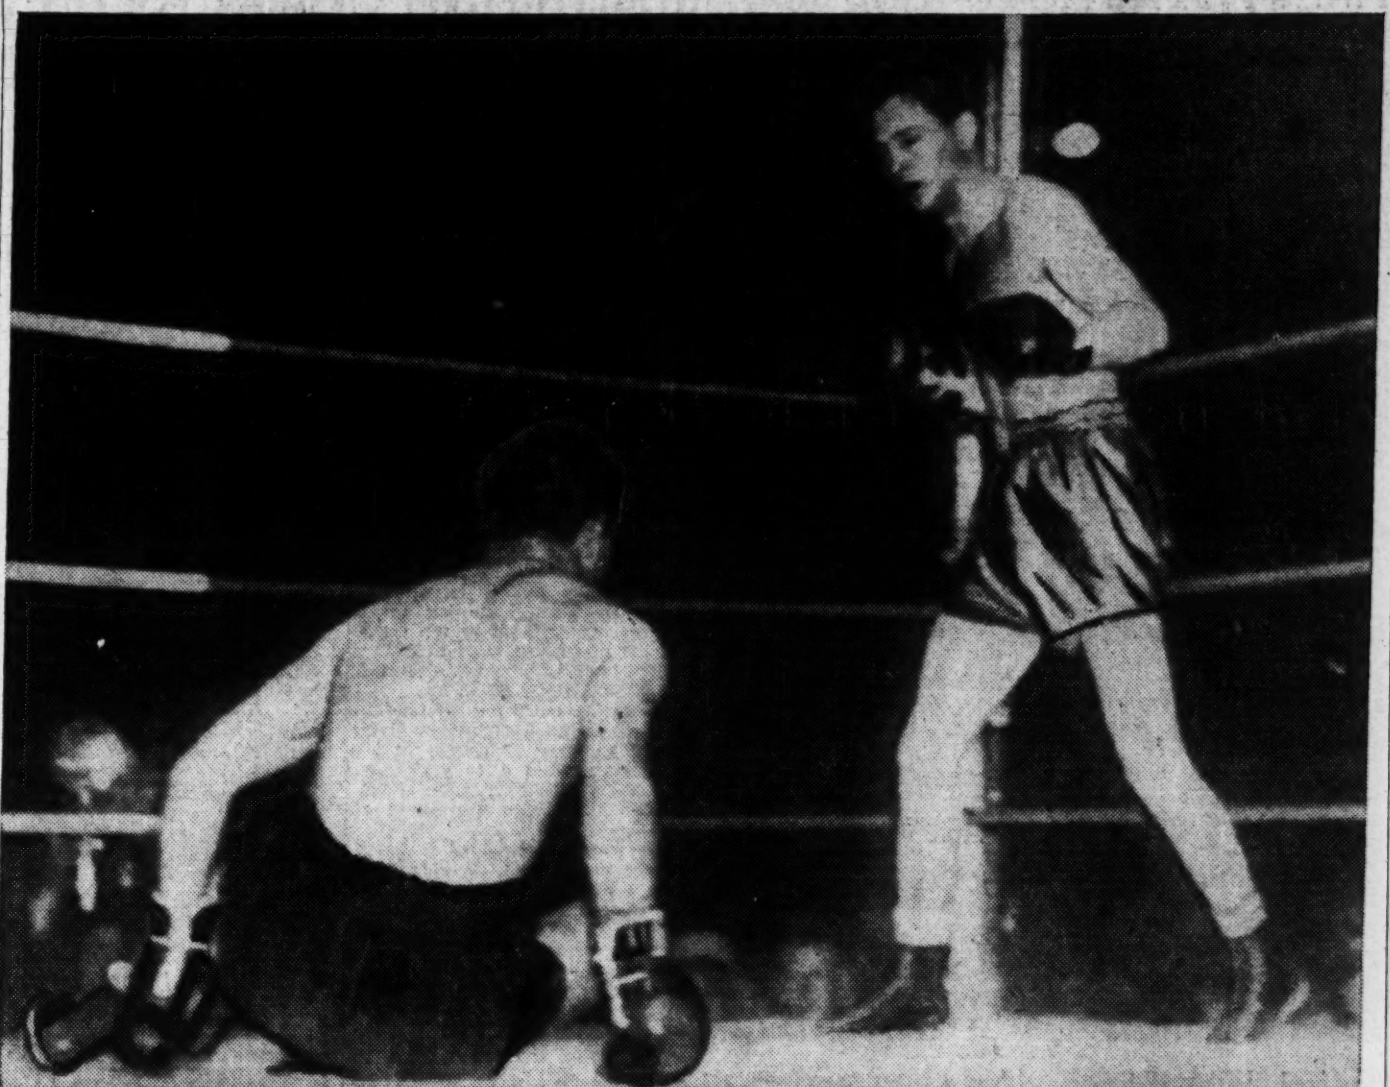

Brown, boxing masterfully and keeping his jabbing left in Krieger's face, won the first three rounds. Krieger won the fourth with a withering attack to head and body.

Brown rallied in the fifth, which also was Krieger's round. A huge hump appeared on Brown's right cheek in the sixth. Krieger went down in this round. Krieger bled profusely in the seventh and then in the eighth, Brown's right eye was almost closed. The left was badly puffed.

Brown had all the worst of it in the ninth, but the fact remains that he was not out on his feet.

BROWN METED OUT PUNISHMENT ALSO—FLOORS KRIEGER IN 6TH

Atlanta's Ben Brown dished out a bit of punishment himself, although losing on a technical knockout to Middleweight Champion Solly Krieger in the ninth round of their non-title bout at Miami last night. Here the champ is seen on the floor following the receipt of one of Ben's smashing left hooks. Brown was still on his feet and battling away when the bout was stopped. The aggressor in the early rounds, Brown vigorously protested when the fight was stopped.

BROWN-KRIEGER DETAIL

By THAD HOLT.

ROUND ONE.

They sparred for a moment and then Brown snapped 3 lefts in to Krieger's face and they piled into a clinch. Krieger missed a wild left hook and slipped to the floor, for no count. They pounded away at each others bodies in close. Brown popped Krieger's head back with a sharp left and Krieger came back with a left that drove Brown's head back. Brown slipped down attempting a left hook, but there was no count. Brown drove a hard left to Krieger's jaw in close and came back with another one that seemed to worry the champ. Brown was boxing beautifully. Krieger caught him with a left under the chin that jarred powerfully.

ROUND TWO.

Krieger missed a wild hook, almost fell down, and Brown was on him in a flash with a right to the body. Brown's left darted into the champion's face five times with no return. Krieger hit Brown with a light right to the chin, and they went into a clinch. Krieger was finding the elusive Brown a difficult target and was bleeding at the mouth from annoying left jabs. Krieger's long left grazed Brown's head. Ben missed two hard rights to the chin. Krieger landed a light left to the face and Brown nailed the champion with the same blow. Brown again snapped his left into Solly's face without return, and Krieger tried a body attack that got nowhere. Brown was cool and confident at the bell.

ROUND THREE.

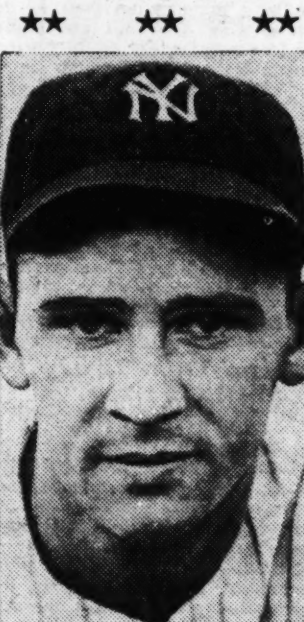

Krieger missed a wild hook at end of round two. Ben's left to the body was short, but he landed four into the body in close. Krieger missed a terrific left hook to the chin. Krieger was trying desperately to find the range against the fast-stepping Atlanta youth. Krieger got in a light right to the head, missed a right hook to the chin and body. Krieger pulled Krieger off the floor. Brown smashed that right in again into Krieger's jaw and the champ tried to get in a close body attack. Krieger landed two sharp rights to the chin and body. Krieger tried six blows over in a neutral corner at Brown's head without touching him. Brown's left popped out fast and straight against the champion's mouth.

ROUND FOUR.

Krieger landed a left to the head and

Gordon Graduated, Leaves for Camp

JOE GORDON, He wants $12,000.

NO HOME MEETS.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 23.—There won't be a single track meet in Athens this year for the simple reason there is no track available.

Joe, Wife Depart With Sheepskin, Unsigned Contract.

EUGENE, Ore., Feb. 23.—(P)—With a sheepskin in his hands and an unsigned contract in his pocket, Joe Gordon said farewell today to his University of Oregon professors. Joe, sensational rookie second baseman of the New York Yankee baseball club, and Mrs. Gordon headed their car for the St. Petersburg (Fla.) training camp, expecting to arrive March 4.

Gordon completed his winter studies at the university here and received his B. S. degree in the school of physical education.

Joe insisted he was not a holdout, but he wants to talk over a few details of the contract with Ed Barrow, Yankee president and general manager. Gordon would not divulge term of the contract, but it was learned from a good source he would not sign for less than $12,000, double the amount he received last year.

The old track has been demolished and a new one will not be ready for the campaign.

LOU AMBERS 8-5 FAVORITE OVER MEXICO PUNCHER

However, Arizmendi May Upset Dope at Madison Square Tonight.

By SID FEDER.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—(P)—There is a very good chance for a lot of embarrassment in the fight world when Baby Arizmendi and Lou Ambers square off for 12 rounds or less in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

If the Mexican "baby" should top the ex-lightweight champion, there'll be enough red faces around to make Bash Boulevard look like a tomato patch.

Ambers will go into the ring a slight favorite, probably at odds of 8 to 5, but that's no guarantee in the current upsetting indoor fight season. In fact, since the campaign got under way last fall, only two betting choices managed to click—and one of these was Joe Louis against John Henry Lewis, which is like betting the Bank of England against a two-bit dice game.

So if Laruping Lou winds up on the short end, the betting fraternity will be embarrassed where it's felt the most—in the pocket-book.

But that's only the beginning. For Ambers already has been designated as the No. 1 challenger for Henry Armstrong's lightweight crown. The New York State Athletic Commission named him, and, following its customary "sound" line of reasoning, refused to withdraw the blessing even when Arizmendi asked just what would happen if the little Mexican finished in front. The commission contended that since it was not a 15-round tussle and that

Spokane, Langdale Open National Cage Meet Here Tonight

WARREN ARENA IS SITE OF FOUR 1ST-ROUND TILTS

Governor Rivers To Welcome Teams; Opener Starts at 6:30.

Four championship basketball games, involving state champions, will lift the curtain on the National Independent tournament tonight at 6:30 o'clock in the Warren arena.

Athletic Round Table of Spokane, Wash., starts tournament action in the opening contest against the Langdale, Ala., five. The Round Table team, after traveling 3,600 miles, pulled into Atlanta Thursday night early this week to start the ball rolling.

In what may be one of the finest games of the tournament, the Firemen from Spindale, N. C., go into action against Tom's Lunch team, of Portland, Maine, in the 7:15 contest.

LARGEST MEET.
The Portland club advanced through one of the largest state tournaments in the country, surviving a 54-team event to win the trip to Georgia. Spindale's tall and rangy crew, with "Nig" Lipscomb in a guard position, is offered stiff competition all the way. Alabama state champions, the Ford V-8's, of Sylacauga, clash with the Corwin-Churchill Motors Phantoms from Birmingham, N. D., in the 8:30 contest. The Bismarck boys left home early this week with the thermometer at 30 below. They are reported to have one of the slickest little ball clubs ever to come out of that frigid state.

The closing contest on the bill features Dixie Gas, of Anderson, S. C., against Sammy's Place, the powerful Dallas, Texas, entry, whose All-American center, Red Connor, flew here from the Lone Star state in order to be on deck for the opening tilt.

TALL AND RANGY.
Dixie Gas, the South Carolina entry, is a tall, rangy club of stars who will pin their hopes on their flashy forward, Willbanks, All-South Carolina star, who undoubtedly will be the favorite player in the tournament.

By ALBERT RILEY JR.
THOMASVILLE, Ga., Feb. 23. (P)—A brilliant array of golfing talent was assembled at the Glen Arven Country Club here today, ready to tee off tomorrow morning in an 18-hole pro-amateur competition to officially open Thomasville's fourth annual $3,000 open tournament program.

Fairing will be drawn tonight for the pro-amateur matches. Bright sunshine greeted the golfers today but cold weather continued from yesterday made low scoring difficult as the crack brigade of touring pros tuned up their war clubs in practice rounds.

NELSON NEEDS 74.
Byron Nelson, the defending champion, from Reading, Pa., who toured the par 72 course in 66, Tuesday, needed a 74 yesterday. Paul Runyan, the P. G. A. champion, had an even par round of 72.

Henry Picard checked in today for the tournament, arriving from New Orleans where he won the Crescent City open last week. Other arrivals today included Johnny Revolta, who won here in 1933, and Sam Snead, leading money winner among the pros last year.

With Nelson likely to rule the favorite to win the 54-hole open competition scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, Picard and Snead may share favoritism along with Dick Metz who won here in 1937 and who was runner-up to Nelson last year.

The last time Metz played at Glen Arven, he fired a record-equaling 64 in practice play. A sentimental favorite among local enthusiasts, Metz came in last night as did Horton Smith, and today Dick was hunting birdies with a gun instead of golf clubs.

JIMMY THOMSON.
Other prominent titles already here include Jimmy Thomson. The long driver who says he is now hitting the ball straighter and 25 yards further from the tee than ever before. Herman Barron, Lloyd Mangrum, Felix Serran, and J. L. Loper and others are practicing.

The amateur delegation for the tournament will be headed by a trio of Atlantans including Charlie Yates, the British amateur champion; Tommy Barnes, southern intercollegiate titleholder, and Dr. Julius Hughes, state champion. The Glen Arven course was described by the golfers as in excellent condition for play.

Charlie Yates Heads Big Atlanta Entry
By ROY WHITE.
A half dozen Atlanta amateurs, including three champions, will tee off today on the Glen Arven course at Thomasville, Ga., in the $3,000 Thomasville open tournament.

Charlie Yates, British amateur champion; Dr. Julius Hughes, the only player ever to win the Atlanta and Georgia titles the same year, and Tommy Barnes, southern intercollegiate titleholder, head the list from Atlanta seeking the simon-pure crown at Thomasville.

Doc Tumlin, East Lake; Slim Bowden, Druid Hills, and Hoke Cooley, assistant professional at the Capital City course, are other Atlantans who will participate in the south Georgia tournament.

A pro-amateur over the 18-hole route this afternoon will open the three-day activities, followed by 18 holes in the open Saturday and 36 holes Sunday.

Reportedly, Thomasville indicates the strongest field, particularly of amateurs, ever to enter the tournament. Willie Turnesa, the national amateur champion, and Bobby Dunkelberger, the sensational young Greensboro, N. C., amateur who won the French amateur crown last year, are other outstanding amateurs entered.

Johnny Oliver, former Georgia champion from Valdosta, will head a strong field of south Georgia amateurs. Oliver has won the simon-pure crown for the past two years, but will have plenty of competition trying to make it three straight.

Byron Nelson is the defending open champion. He is already on the scene and has had several sensational practice rounds.

LOU AMBERS 8-5 OVER ARIZMENDI

the contracts called for the fighters to scale anywhere under 140 pounds, they couldn't consider the outcome, although both are standard-size lightweight.

Arizmendi, a rugged little fellow who must have at least ninety pounds of his weight above the waist, may fool everyone by coming in under the 135-pound lightweight limit. If he does, and then takes Lou anyway, the logic of the commission's stand in favor of Ambers will be something more than simple to figure out.

Cracker Fans Regard Emil Mailho Highly

Opinions Differ Sharply as to Chances of Atlanta Nine.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.
A veritable chasm separates the opinions of today's fan interviewees accosted in regards to their views on the 1935 Atlanta Crackers.

Only on Emil Mailho, irrepressible peppercorn outgarden, was agreement reached. Miss Grace Jackson, State Revenue Department employee, likes the Frenchman's friendly gymnastics, his spirit and clowning. Mrs. H. F. Head, local loan company worker, "could watch Mailho field 'em off the fences forever." Ted Zuber, sporting goods salesman, thinks Emil the Cracker's only top-notch performer. R. M. Bowen, a downtown office building manager, regards Mailho highly, too, "but that Jack Bolling is my favorite," he avers. "He's tops."

LOVE COMES LAST

Hannah Is Jealous of Laura Because She Works for Bart

By JULIA ANNE MOORE.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: Life has been very kind to her. Laura Wiley thinks, especially the two years since Andy Cooper came into it. She is successful as a secretary, is selling her fiction writings and is able to care for her sister Nina, now 21, who at times is despondent because of her trouble. Then Bartley Ford, top-rank advertising man, proposed taking over Andy's Newburg agency and making him an executive. Laura does not want to leave Newburg because of Nina and Andy's going would change her whole existence. Then Andy saves Nina from drowning. Laura goes to his office, kisses him and just as Laura enters says she loves him. Ford finds Laura weeping at her studio desk. Always fearful of Nina's condition, Laura tells Andy she doesn't love him and tells Ford she'd like to try radio in New York, as he had suggested. Andy knowing Laura's motive, says he'll play her game—pretended to love Nina—hoping thus to show Laura she is foolish. But Laura accepts Ford's offer of an executive position in his New York office. Andy battles with a holdup man. Nina is shot in the arm and Andy fails to get Laura on the phone. Ford's valet saying she is out with Ford. Laura has gone with Bart for a week end with Dale Cromwell, prominent in radio and an adviser to Ford. Three weeks now and every night Ford has taken her. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT XVI.

"I'm the little Cromwell girl," Hannah said lightly. "Remember?"

"The one in the red swimming suit?" Laura smiled. "I never forget anything in red."

"Red for danger," Hannah said. "And passion."

"It always makes me think of sunsets, Hannah."

"Does it, really? I don't think I've ever seen a red sunset."

Laura didn't say anything and after a little Hannah asked, "You're in Bart's office, aren't you?"

"Yes."

"Have you been there long?"

"No, only a few weeks."

"Like it?"

"Yes, of course," Laura said. "Very much."

Another silence—another question: "Bart's always been set against women in business. How did you do it?"

Amused, Laura said, "I hypnotized him, then I got hold of a pair of forceps and extracted his prejudice. And while I had him under my power, I drew up a contract and made him sign it. When he came to, I was working for him. He couldn't very well do anything about it then, could he?"

Hannah didn't answer, but presently she said, "Some women do hypnotize men. I've seen them do it. It's a dangerous practice, though."

Some one came up behind them. It was Dale. He walked at Laura's side and after a few moments Hannah trotted off to join a group ahead.

"Hannah needs some one like you," Dale said, quietly. "To talk with, I mean. This young crowd keeps her amused, but I'm afraid they have very little to give her otherwise." After a pause he said, "If you could find an opportunity to talk with her, learn what she thinks about, what she needs to round out her character. I would be deeply grateful, Miss Wiley."

Laura thought, puzzled and yet pleased. He barely knows me and he asks me to do that.

They had reached the house. The others were drifting in, but Laura was loathe to quit this peace and quiet and the promise of a moon in the lightning sky. "Would it," she asked, "be very rude of me to stay out here a few minutes, alone?"

Dale smiled. "As long as you like."

He left her there and presently she strolled off across the lawn and lay on her back on the cool grass. She was not tired, but she welcomed the opportunity to think uninterrupted. All evening she had been composing, in little stolen snatches, the letter she would write to Nina.

In some subtle way she must convey to Nina that she was not merely coming to a big city but to an exciting adventure. For a long while she lay there phrasing, devising what she would write to Nina and at last the moon came up and a shadow moved across the lawn and Bart said, "An excellent opportunity to dispose of unfinished business."

She sat up, laughing softly at the memory of his embarrassing experience on their arrival. Then the laughter faded into silence and with it the desire to laugh, for she knew that now, before it was too late, she must tell Bart about Andy.

Bart said, "I used to hear people talk about 'the beauty of the night' and have not the slightest notion what they meant. 'But now...' he finished with a gesture that took in the whole moonlit world around them."

"It's heavenly," Laura said. She thought: How shall I tell him? Shall I say simply that I love Andy with all my heart and soul—or shall I be evasive, say there's some one else and let him draw his own conclusions?

But she could say nothing, of course, until Bart had opened the way, which made it the more difficult. At this moment she could tell him with little fear of hurting him. Later—but perhaps, she thought hopefully, it might not be necessary to tell him at all. Not tonight, anyway.

Bart said, after a long pause, "is a composite—the moon, the stars, the trees in silhouette, the night noises, the silence—you, Laura."

She turned her head and found his face so close to hers that she could feel his breath on her cheeks. She had not expected that and now when she should have told him about Andy, she found it impossible because Bart had pulled her into his arms and Bart's lips were on hers.

It had happened in a moment, all of it, and now Bart was sitting back, looking at her face that was like apple blossoms in the moonlight—and Laura said, gently, "There's something I must tell you, Bart."

"I've something to tell you first," Bart said. "It's this..."

"Please, Bart."

"I'm sorry, but you must hear me first. Nothing you can tell me will ever make the slightest difference to me. So why bother? I've not asked you to commit yourself, I never will. I love you. You know that. But I'm asking nothing, Laura."

Laura said, "When you love some one, you ask a great deal. You want to be loved in return."

"Want to be, hope to be—and ultimately may be loved in return," Bart said. "But asking nothing."

"You don't understand Bart..."

He gripped her shoulders and shook her gently. "Don't be stubborn," he grinned. "You like me all right, don't you?"

"I do. Of course I do. Very much."

"All right, we're friends. When we can be more than friends, you'll tell me?"

"But—"

"If and when—you'll tell me?" Laura said, slowly. "Yes. . . ."

He jumped to his feet, gave her hands and pulled her up. "Now, off to your trundle bed and a good night's rest. Dale plans an early game of golf. You play, don't you?"

She shook her head, regretfully. "No, but I just want to write an important letter to write and I'd like to get it done tomorrow morning, if possible."

"I'll see that you have stationery, stamps, quiet and some one to get it off in the moon mail," Bart said. He took her face between his hands and kissed her on the mouth. "The universal symbol of friendship," he said. "Good night, Laura."

"Good night, Bart," she said quietly, and walked away.

Hannah was hurrying down the stairs as Laura entered the front hall. The girl came to an abrupt halt and her eyes fixed searching-ly on Laura's face.

Laura said, "I'm slipping off to bed, Hannah."

The corners of Hannah's red mouth tightened. "Where's Bart?"

"He was outside on the lawn a few moments ago," Laura said.

Hannah walked stiffly across the hall and slammed the door behind her as she went out.

Laura thought, as she went up to her room: How can I make friends with her when she so thoroughly dislikes me?

There was no immediate answer to that question, but she was beginning to understand the reason for Hannah's hostile attitude toward her. The girl was plainly interested in Bart, which was amusing—yes, and a little disturbing. Hannah, Laura reflected, was not another Nina, a creature of rickety emotions. What Hannah felt, she would feel in every atom of her being. Seeing her that first time beside the pool, Laura had known that. Now she thought: Poor Bart, he's likely to have his hands full if she really imagines she's in love with him.

The letter to Nina was written and mailed and that last lingering remnant of doubt had vanished in the process. The act of talking to Nina, even remotely by letter, was in effect putting her well-considered plan into operation. And having taken that initial step, every subsequent move stood out clearly in her mind. It was all so simple, so logical that she thought of Nina as a problem already disposed of, leaving only the not very perplexing question as to how she might best make amends to Andy.

She and Bart played three sets of tennis that afternoon and spent the remaining hours before dinner in the pool, not actually swimming but splashing around in the cool water while they talked casually of everything under the sun. Only once was Laura serious, and then but briefly, for she was nearer real happiness now than she had been since the days when the name of Bartley Ford was nothing more than an identifying label for a man Andy had met on the coast during an advertising convention months before.

BILL IS APPROVED TO LIMIT HOSPITAL ARCHITECT'S FEES

House Committee Would Cut Payment for Milledgeville Services to Three Per Cent of Cost.

The house committee on the state of the republic yesterday voted unanimously to report favorably a bill to limit architectural fees for the new Milledgeville hospital to 3 per cent.

Chairman H. B. Edwards announced that the committee had agreed to hold in abeyance its action on a bill by Representative John C. Parker, of Colquitt, to abolish the recently created Milledgeville authority and permit the Welfare Board to carry on the building program.

Contract in Existence. The bill approved is being sponsored by Representative Jack Forrester, of Crisp. It provides that the hospital authority cannot carry out the provisions of a contract between the Welfare Board and Rober & Company, under which the Atlanta company is to receive 6 per cent for its architectural services.

Speaker Pro Tem. Parker added an amendment limiting the salary of M. J. Yeomans, chief counsel for the authority, to $300 a month. Judge Yeomans resigned as attorney general to become associated with the authority and it is understood that his salary is the same as that he received as attorney general, $5,500 a year.

Limit to Service. Under the provisions of the Parker amendment the services of Judge Yeomans would continue only so long as construction work is under way.

Arguing for approval of his bill to abolish the authority, Parker displayed a page from the comic section of The Constitution to committee members.

"Here we have a cartoon showing Mrs. L. W. Robert giving a party for a horse," Parker said. "We can but believe that the party is being financed with Georgia taxpayers' money."

Parker said he would press for committee action on his bill next week. The house economy committee has criticized the 6 per cent fee allowed Rober & Company as being "too high."

ATLANTA BOYS' CLUB JOINS U. S. GROUP

Certificate of Membership in National Organization Presented Draper.

Official recognition of the Atlanta Boys' Club as a member of the Boys' Club of America was accorded yesterday in the presentation of a certificate of membership to Jesse Draper, secretary of the organization. Presentation was made by Judge W. H. Montgomery, field representative of the national organization.

Before leaving the city, Judge Montgomery inspected the local club and declared it to compare favorably with other clubs in the south and in many respects, to rate far above the average. He complimented W. W. Woolfolk, executive director, for the efficient manner in which the club was being operated, and commended the fine efforts and services being rendered Atlanta youth by Henry C. Heinz, president, and members of the board of directors.

Membership in the Boys' Club of America, Inc., does not in any way affect the autonomy of a member-unit, Mr. Draper explained. It involves the obligation of active co-operation with other members of the organization in the exchange of ideas, the support of co-operative effort, representation at conferences and conventions and the presentation of reports of membership and activities, he said.

The club is non-sectarian and is made up of boys who voluntarily associate with the organization. It provides a meeting place for boys and maintains a program of physical, educational and recreational activities, with responsible leadership.

ALUMNI OF HONOR PRESIDENT OF W & L

Dr. Francis Gaines To Be Guest at Dinner.

Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of Washington & Lee University, Lexington, Va., and nationally known educator, will be guest tonight of the Atlanta Alumni Association at a dinner at the Piedmont Driving Club. The affair will start at 8 o'clock and is expected to be attended by approximately 50 members of the association and their wives, it was announced by Willis M. Everett Jr., secretary.

Dr. Gaines will arrive in the city this morning. He will be entertained at luncheon at the Atlanta Athletic Club by a group of alumni, when plans will be discussed concerning more representation from Georgia among the student body.

Bruce F. Woodruff, alumni president, will preside at the dinner tonight and introduce Dr. Gaines, who is expected to speak on education in general and the plans of Washington & Lee in particular.
